POISON RUM BLAMED FOR FIVE DEATHS HERE

7 Known Dead in Hotel Fire; Baby Girl Victim

KERR TO TESTIFY IN SCHOOLEY PROBE

Today

Forty-Five Billions, Dumped. Strange Russia, No Idle. Big Guns Are Impressive, But, An Educational Auction.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

CHRISTMAS IS past once more and the real world comes back, with the New Year of opportunity just ahead.

It is time for our statesmen, and all of us, to think and work for this country and ourselves, even though Europe should disapprove.

SENATOR BORAH reminds you that "since 1915, in one way and another, we have put close to $45,000,000,000 in Europe."

FORTY-FIVE BILLION DOLLARS is a large sum, more than twice the total amount of our present national debt, 45 times our national debt as it stood just before the war.

THEY MAY be wrong, but it seems to Americans that we have done our share toward paying for a war that we did not start. What we really think and feel about it and about American traitors, will not be expressed until Europe has its next war and comes here whining again for men and money.

THE LEAGUE of Nations international labor bureau tells you:

"The world's needy this Christmas total 100,000,000 men, women and children."

And, not complimentary to us, this country has more out of work than any other nation.

ALSO, SOMETHING for our "best minds" to think about, RUSSIA HAS NO UNEMPLOYED. Of course we are superior to Russia in every way, we all admit that but, at least, they keep their people working.

Why don't we send one of our 10,000 commissions to discover how they do it?

YOU READ in one column that 100,000,000 human beings are in need and in another that owners of unsold cattle in Jugoslavia leave them standing, abandoned in the market, because owners cannot feed them.

In Hungary six head of cattle sold for $9 and Hungarian horses, among the finest in the world, find no buyers. This world, that organizes so powerfully for war, seems unable to organize for protection against its own follies.

WILL ROGERS, in far off Asia, sighing for home, you may be sure, is impressed by the sight of a British super-dreadnaught. Says he:

"When you see those guns pointing at you, you don't ask whether they (the British) are on a gold, silver, waste paper or zinc basis."

WHEN THE COMMANDER of the super-dreadnaught sees a dozen big bombers hovering in the air, ready to sink, his floating steel target, after light, darting speed planes have swept his deck clear of machinery with light bombs, that commander will know how Chinese soldiers feel when Japanese planes appear.

A SMALL CITY has had its books seized by state authorities that want to know what officials have done with city funds. Examiners are at work.

If the real estate of some minor city were sold at public auction to pay municipal debts, good might come of it.

It might compel businessmen in other cities to take an interest in city government and in the elected rascals that steal as ceaselessly as rats in a granary.

THE RUSSIAN foreign office announces discovery of a plot to assassinate the Japanese ambassador in Moscow and then force a war between Russia and Japan.

That might be called "Bolshevist nonsense," but for the fact that the murder of an Austrian prince in 1914 brought about a war that caused the deaths of 20,000,000 men better than himself and the ruin of many countries.

RUSSIA, PROBABLY, would have brains enough to refuse a war. It takes two to make war between nations so far apart.

Later, at her leisure, Russia might show Japan the difference between enlightened Russians, fighting for themselves, and ignorant Russian moujiks, driven by a worthless czar and his grand dukes.

GANDHI ADVISES the Christian world of fighting nations to "heed" Christ's word, and read the Sermon on the Mount. If Christ's teachings were heeded, says Gandhi, there would be no need of a disarmament conference, and no war.

Gandhi, however, knows the words about bringing, not peace, but a sword. The clearing out of the temple was not a pacifist move, or accomplished by passive resistance.

TO HAVE PEACE you must have real civilization, and the world has no real civilization.

While you have criminals, you must have police.

Abolishing police would not abolish crime.

FIVE DEATHS HERE LAID TO RUM

Body of Man Found Dead in Alleged Speakeasy Thrown Into Field Near Home

Three men were held and homicide detectives expected to make more arrests today in connection with the death of John Ennis, 48, of 1728 Forbes street, in an alleged speakeasy, and the transporting of his body to a field in the strip. Investigation also was under way as to the source of poison liquor blamed for four other deaths in the city.

John Eizak, 24, 2307 Penn avenue, is held charged with keeping a disorderly house at 2114 Mulberry way. John LaScola, 22, of 2115 Mulberry way, and Samuel Boyd, 62, of 1809 Penn avenue, are held on suspicious person charges.

Police report that John Ennis, Jr., of the Forbes street address stenographer in the office of Superintendent of Police Peter P. Walsh, called them late last night, complained that his father was lying in a field near Twenty-seventh street and Allegheny Valley Railroad. He said friends had informed him of his father's whereabouts.

FOUND IN FIELD

Police found the elder Ennis dead in the field. They believe that he had visited the alleged disorderly house on Mulberry way, early Christmas morning and fallen asleep. When found to be dead, they say, he was carried to the field and deserted.

Homicide Detective William Harris, investigating, arrested the three after police raided the Mulberry way house and confiscated six one-gallon bottles of moonshine whisky, six half-pint bottles of moonshine whisky and one quart of wine.

An autopsy revealed alcoholism was the cause of the death of Patrick Madine, 48, of 5036 Belasco street, who was found unconscious last night in an alley in the rear of 54 South Eighteenth street, according to a morgue report.

MAN GOES BLIND

Blinded shortly after he had left a Hill district resort, Earl Williams, 29, Negro, of 16 Trent street, died shortly after he was admitted to the Mercy Hospital, early yesterday, according to a coroner's report.

Poison rum also was blamed for the death of James Jenkins, 65, Negro, of 635 Second avenue, Homestead, who died in the Homestead Hospital shortly after his collapse in the home of Florence Flodin, of Beech way, Homestead, according to a coroner's report.

Carson Holmes, Negro, was pronounced dead at the Pittsburgh Hospital shortly after police had found him unconscious in Larimer avenue. He had been drinking, according to a coroner's report.

'Plot' to Kill Tokio Envoy Denounced As Russian 'Frame-Up'

Czechoslovakia Lays Fabricated Scheme To Moscow

International News Service.

PRAGUE, Dec. 26.—The Czechoslovakian government charged today that the alleged plot to assassinate the Japanese ambassador at Moscow, Koki Hirota, which brought about the recall of Dr. Carl Vanek, Czechoslovakian diplomat, was a "frame-up" engineered by the Soviet G. P. U., or secret police.

Vanek, an official statement said, was the victim of an agent provacateur in the employ of the G. P. U.

Pope Urges World Union of Churches

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—A call for the union of Protestants and Catholics the world over was issued by Pope Pius XI today in an encyclical entitled "Lux Veritatis."

The encyclical, meaning "the light of truth" and dated on Christmas, commemorates the fifteen hundredth anniversary of the council of Ephesus, which condemned the doctrines of Nestorius, patriarch of Constantinople.

The pontiff addressed to Protestants a paternal exhortation to follow the example of Catholics in invoking the protection of the Virgin Mary as a mediator and intercessor with God, and said that if it was believed Jesus Christ was God, she who bore him must be called the Mother of God.

The Pope expressed the wish that he might witness in alliance of the orthodox church with the Catholic church before he dies.

The Pope will chant a mass Sunday which will be heard throughout the world as it is broadcast by the Vatican City radio station in the first solely religious ceremony to be heard over the papal radio.

The famous St. Peter's Cathedral is to be the scene of the ceremony, which will feature the closing of the anniversary. The mass will begin at 10 a. m. (4 a. m. E. S. T.) The broadcast will be on a wavelength of 50.26 meters.

Baby Girl and Her Parents Among Victims; 12 Saved By Firemen, 10 Missing

International News Service.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Dec. 26.—(INS.)—Bodies of five persons, one a baby girl, had been recovered and two more bodies were seen by firemen in the smouldering ruins today five hours after flames has destroyed New Court Hotel.

Hotel records were destroyed. A check-up from memory was made and 10 of the 57 occupants unaccounted for, but it was hoped most of them had found shelter with other fire refugees in homes in various sections of the city.

The last two bodies located were observed by firemen from a vantage point. The ruins had to cool considerably before firemen could reach them.

Charred bodies of the first five victims were dug from the ruins by firemen. They were:

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Knight and their two-year-old baby and two unidentified men.

Twelve guests at the hotel, a five-story brick building formerly the Mansion Hotel, were rescued by firemen.

Others in the building, which was 50 years old, fled to safety unaided.

The scene of the fire, the worst in this city since the conflagration, of 1888, was in the heart of the downtown district. Burning embers tossed over a wide area by the high wind gave the firemen a four-hour battle.

Bodies of the victims were discovered by firemen before the flames were under control. The body of Mrs. Knight was found with her baby clasped in her arms on the floor near her bed. Her husband's body was reclining over the bed in an attitude of prayer. Knight, aroused by the flames, apparently had made a brave effort to save his wife and child.

Rise in Mercury Will Follow Cold

A touch of winter that sent the mercury to 26 early today was to give way to increasing cloudiness and rising temperature tomorrow, the weather bureau predicted. Moderate weather prevailed over the western plains today.

A trace of snow yesterday failed to affect the green Christmas which marked the holiday here and virtually the entire country.

BANDIT BULLET KILLS AIDE

The bullet that took the life of J. F. Culliman, of Youngstown, O., was to be examined today in an attempt to prove it was fired by his companion in the alleged attempt to hold up Morris Wolf's shoe store, 1707 Center avenue, yesterday.

J. L. Keenan, also of Youngstown, captured after a chase, is charged with the murder. When Keenan struck Wolf on the head with a revolver, the weapon discharged, sending the slug through Wolf's hat and into the forehead of Culliman, the accomplice, who was waiting outside, according to the police.

Keenan fled, following the shooting, police declared, and was captured shortly later in the home of Mrs. Bella Rocco, 33, of 1413 Fifth avenue, where police arrested Mrs. Rocco and Marion Marsh, 23, of Youngstown.

CONTROLLER VOLUNTARY WITNESS

'Higher-Ups' Likely to Be Called; Indicted Clerk Summoned in Inquiry

City Controller James P. Kerr will testify before the grand jury which on Monday intends to investigate the transactions of deposed City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley, provided his presence is desired.

Asked if he had been subpenaed, the Controller said:

"I have not. I have informed the District Attorney that I stand ready to appear, and he said that if I were needed, he would call me."

Controller Kerr employed Price, Waterhouse & Co., to make the audit, resulting in a grand jury probe.

A number of persons were subpenaed today, including some well known personages in political life. Some surprises are said to be likely in that direction.

John McKibbin, indicted chief clerk in the treasurer's office, was among those for whom subpenas were issued today to appear before the grand jury Monday.

Those called, it is reported, were summoned for the purpose of obtaining information regarding loans and deposits in closed banks and especially personal loans and overdrawn accounts, which will figure in the probe against Schooley.

Switching of $66,000 school funds into the delinquent tax deposits of a closed bank, it is reported, will be probed by the grand jury.

Ham, Syrup and Books Rain In Yule Card Storm Here

Pittsburghers today were digging their way out of an avalanche of several million Christmas cards.

The cards expressed a million tastes in decorations. W. L. Mellon's was, as usual, a plain card bearing the season's greetings. Mrs. Enoch Rauh sent books, John Francies distributed quarts of maple syrup, and Joseph N. Mackrell surprised many folks by offering many happy returns of the day in the shape of a ham plus a side of bacon.

Mayor Kline sent letters expressing himself, and Gov. and Mrs. Pinchot's was a photograph of a palm tree they saw on their South Seas trip. John McGarvey presented Santa Claus as a victim of the—er, economic change.

Cy Hungerford cartooned himself and his mother, and the Pitt Athletic Council photographed its favorite picture—a stadium filled with customers. Congressman Erk mailed a silver Washington bicentennial button.

And then there was the card that came to the Sun-Telegraph, a simple offering signed by that most dependable of all persons, "Constant Reader."

Policeman Lands Knockout Despite Tight Coat

A tight coat which cramped his fighting style was almost disastrous for Patrolman James Fay.

Officer Fay, patroling the Second avenue beat, last night noticed three men loitering about his beat. In order to effect a disguise, the officer put on a civilian coat a few sizes too small.

When he accosted Frank O'Day, 25, of Youngstown, O., and asked him to explain his wanderings, Frank landed a hard right on the patrolman's jaw. Cramped by his coat, Fay managed to land a knockout punch and the fight ended.

The Youngstown battler explained it to Magistrate Leo Rothenberg, in Central Police Court, who assessed him $5, records show.

REVOLT AGAINST DEBT CUTTING GROWS IN WASHINGTON

OPPOSE NATION TAKING PART IN PARLEY

Watson Declares Congress Set Against Concessions; Rankin Cautions Hoover

By ARTHUR HACHTEN
United Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—The revolt against any move further to cancel foreign nations' debts to the United States gained force today, with strong statements by Senator Watson, of Indiana, Republican leader of the Senate, and Representative John E. Rankin, Mississippi Democrat.

Suggestions in the report of the Young Plan advisory committee that an international conference be held next month to consider scaling or postponing arrangements, drew little reception in congressional circles as far as American participation was concerned.

Senator Watson said:

"In the present frame of mind of the Congress, there is not the slightest possibility that the United States will agree to any further reduction or cancellation of the World War debts. There would have to be a complete metamorphosis in the opinion of the national legislature."

HOOVER CAUTIONED

Rankin, one of the leaders in the fight against the one-year moratorium, as a step leading to complete cancellation, said:

"President Hoover would be acting contrary to the wishes of Congress if he stepped forward as he did last June with a grand gesture to relieve the world of financial burdens by piling them upon the United States.

"Congress stipulated in the moratorium bill that his action was not to be interpreted as favoring any reduction or cancellation of these solemn obligations."

Possibilities that the foreign debt policy of the Hoover administration may become an issue in the 1932 presidential campaign were seen in Democratic circles. Speaker Garner, boomed for the Democratic presidential nomination, has set himself squarely against extending the moratorium or cutting the debts.

Nations Await U. S. Decision on Parley

PARIS, Dec. 26.—(INS)—The international debts and reparations conference suggested in the report of the advisory committee of the Young plan almost certainly will be held January 18 at The Hague, Holland, it appeared today. France and England have dispatched notes to other countries interested in the parley suggesting this time and place.

Success of the conference is conceded by many to depend upon the attitude of the United States. There has been no indication as to that country's participation. It is generally felt the presence of American delegates, given some power to act, is vital to the success of the meetings.

ARREST IN CHILD SLAYING NEAR

CINCINNATI, Dec. 26.—(INS)—An arrest during the weekend was promised today by authorities seeking the slayer of 6-year-old Marian McLean.

Investigation centered on the microscopic scrutiny of clothing found in the home of one of four suspects under arrest. Chemists sought to determine whether stains on the apparel were those of blood.

Marian's body was found in a tenement house basement last Tuesday.

A woman's white purse was also under investigation as a possible clue. The purse, containing a list of several girls' names, was discovered in the home of one of the suspects, Charles Bischoff, 45-year-old shoemaker, who lives in the tenement where the body was found. Names of the other three suspects held were not divulged by police.

Joseph McLean, Marian's father, was reunited with his estranged wife last night. Stranded in Phoenix, Ariz., where he had sought work 15 months, McLean was brought here by airplane to attend the funeral.

HEARST PRAISE BOOMS GARNER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—(United Universal)—A full-fledged presidential boom for Speaker John N. Garner developed today as a result of William Randolph Hearst's editorial describing the Texan as "the hope of the Democratic party."

While the formation of Garner-for-President clubs in Texas insures the Speaker of being the "favorite son" of the Lone Star State in the national convention, it was learned eastern leaders are encouraging Garner to spread his wings and become a national candidate.

It is known also Garner has been approached by influential southern Democrats who are dissatisfied with the other Democratic candidates in the field, in an effort to get the Speaker to declare himself openly as a candidate.

Garner merely smiled over the fresh impetus given to his boom today and said:

"It is naturally gratifying to me to have such an influential Democrat as Mr. Hearst express confidence in me and for my friends in Texas to even mention me in connection with the presidency. All I have to say is that I have no presidential bee buzzing around my bonnet."

Roosevelt to Urge Speed on Tax Bill

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 26.—(INS)—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt today considered a plan to send a special message to the Legislature when it convenes January 6 urging an emergency tax measure be rushed through at once.

Levies created under the new act could be put into effect by February 1 if action were taken immediately, the Governor declared. The expected $100,000,000 deficit during the next fiscal year could thus be provided for, he said.

Ohio Mayor's Cousin Dies in 50-Foot Fall

DENNISON, O., Dec. 26.—Police today were investigating the cause of the fatal fall of Edward Maxwell, 22, of North First street, Dennison, from the back porch of the home of Dudge Downey, also of Dennison, late yesterday. Maxwell is thought to have been calling on Downey, who was out when Maxwell took the 50-foot plunge. The victim was cousin of Mayor Robert W. Maxwell.

Three Negroes, unarmed, early today overpowered J. E. Elbert, motorman of a Lincoln avenue night street car as he reached the city limits on his out-run, and robbed him of $24 in cash and two pass books valued at $15 each.

They escaped before he could spread an alarm.

They attempted to pound open the fare box, but were unable to break it.

Overheated Furnace Causes $1,400 Fire

A fire resulting from an overheated furnace yesterday damaged the home of Patrick S. Joyce, 234 Birmingham avenue, $1,400, police report.

HULL ASSAILS HIGH TARIFF

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—(AP)—High tariff barriers are held directly responsible by Senator Cordell Hull, of Tennessee, for the present inability of some foreign nations to meet their external debt payments.

This leading Democratic champion of a lowered tariff proposed in a statement issued last night that the European nations owing war debts to this country approach the United States with a plan of simultaneous reduction of excessive tariffs.

The question of debt reduction, he said, should not otherwise be broached, Hull said.

"Hungary has now joined many debtor countries in South America and other parts of the world, which during recent months have defaulted in the payment of interest and installments on indebtedness due abroad. This calamitous situation is directly caused by the inability of these nations to effect a mutually profitable interchange of surplus products and thereby create favorable financial and trade balances with which to pay."

LABOR SCORES LEGISLATURE ON RELIEF

Half Million Waste Only Achievement, Says State Body; Martin Satisfied

HARRISBURG, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—Conflicting claims as to unemployment relief legislation approved by the Legislature were made last night by Gen. Edward Martin, State Treasurer and Republican state chairman, and the State Federation of Labor.

Gen. Martin praised the Legislature for the type of bills adopted and the State Federation of Labor criticized it for doing nothing but spending $50,000 of the taxpayers' money. Martin said:

"From all over Pennsylvania word comes to me of the gratification of the people over the stalwart stand of their Legislature against increased taxation.

"I am hearing, too, that eminent lawyers, in and out of the Legislature, feel that the courts will sustain the Talbot bill. The unanimity of the action of the two houses is plainly the voice of the people. The $10,000,000 appropriated can be used immediately and is the economical and effective plan of relief.

"Every one, of course, joins in the demand that the hungry must be fed, but the rights of the small taxpayer must be considered. This is not the time for the forming of new and expensive departments of government."

LABOR PROTESTS

John A. Phillips, president, and James E. Kelley, secretary, in a letter to members of the labor federation, called a meeting of all local affiliated bodies to meet here Monday at 10 o'clock. The letter said:

"The Legislature, called to provide immediate relief, after costing the people of Pennsylvania half a million dollars, and idling away the time for six weeks, has done practically nothing to meet the emergency.

"There is no question as to the prevalence of distress. There is no question of the responsibility of the state to meet it. But there is a question about anything worth while being done by the Legislature."

The letter urged all members to call on their representatives and senators before Monday to "demand that the Legislature do something real about unemployment relief."

VETOES BILLS

Gov. Pinchot yesterday announced he had vetoed the Blumberg and Witkin bills appropriating $2,350,000 for improvement and maintenance of Philadelphia streets and highways.

The Governor's action disposed of all of the 10 measures placed on his desk by the Legislature last week before it recessed until next Monday night. Of these 10 measures the Governor has signed two, permitted three to become laws through his failure to act on them, and vetoed five bills.

SOVIET DEATH PLOT CHARGED

at Moscow, the statement said, revealed the following facts:

Vanek attended a gay diplomatic ball in Moscow early in December, where a group of foreign attaches discussed the Sino-Japanese conflict in Manchuria.

Speculation quickly turned to the prospects of Russia and Japan becoming involved in war because of Japanese invasion of the Russian sphere of influence in occupying Tsitsihar, capital of Heilungkiang province.

Vanek was asked his opinion. He replied laughing:

"Well, history might repeat itself. Suppose someone assassinated or attempted to assassinate the Japanese ambassador here. That would cause war, wouldn't it?"

REMARK OVERHEARD

The remark was overheard by a member of the Soviet secret police who had gained admission to the ball but was misunderstood or deliberately misrepresented, the Czechoslovakian government asserted. The incident was reported to the G. P. U., which immediately magnified and elaborated it, supplying details which the government here considers to be entirely false.

The whole affair was considered today at a meeting of the cabinet officials still in Prague over the holidays. Since the Soviet government has published the news to the world, Czechoslovakia may demand a formal apology, accompanied by a threat to sever existing relations between the two countries.

Chinese Curb President In War Crisis

SHANGHAI, Dec. 26.—(INS.)—Spurred to action over Japan's recent activities in Manchuria, the Chinese Kuomintang (Nationalist) congress, called in a hurried plenary session, today effected drastic changes in the structure of the government in effort to deal more capably with the Manchurian situation.

The principal change adopted will deprive the President of administrative responsibility, shifting this burden to the executive yuan, which is elevated to the position of a cabinet.

A government council will be formed, placing the judiciary under the executive yuan, rather than under a judicial yuan as previously.

A severe split within the Cantonese clique was foreshadowed today as Sun Fo, aged leader, returned to Shanghai. Before his arrival it had appeared likely the Kuomintang would issue a circular telegram asking the recall of Chiang Kai-Shek, who resigned as President a few days ago.

With the arrival upon the scene of Sun Fo, however, a serious fight for power was in sight.

HOLIDAY DEATH TOLL NEAR 200

Associated Press.

America's dead in the Christmas observance was near the 200 mark today.

At least 197 persons met sudden deaths. A majority of them died in automobile fatalities, lured to the highways by the comparatively mild weather that prevailed throughout the country.

There were two major motor car crashes, seven dying in a grade crossing accident at Batavia, N. Y., and eight being killed at Charlotte, N. C., when a train struck a loaded automobile.

Of the fatalities more than 130 resulted from automobile mishaps. Approximately half of them occurred in the Middle West. Burns, falls and fireworks were among the causes of other deaths, while nine were reported dead from poison liquor. Five of the holiday liquor fatalities were in Pittsburgh.

Among the injured was Estelle Taylor, former wife of Jack Dempsey. She was hurt, but not seriously, in a motor car collision in Hollywood, Cal.

Rebel Chief Slain By Italian Troops

ROME, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—Nearly 10 years of guerrilla warfare in the Cirenaica section of the Italian colony of Libia was believed today to be ended with the killing of the chief of the movement, Jusuf Bu Rahil, in a dramatic last stand.

Official reports said Rahil and a number of his men had been slain in a battle last week after they had made a desperate attempt to break through the Italian lines into Egypt. The Italian troops had stretched a barbed wire entanglement along 108 miles of the border.

Mad Elephant Wrecks Building on Rampage

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 26.—(AP.)—Tusko, Portland's mad elephant, went on a rampage here yesterday, wrecked the building which has been his winter quarters, and all but escaped before several score workmen and handlers fettered him with steel cable and chain. Dozens of police kept rifles trained upon him to shoot had he escaped.

The six-ton beast wrenched his front feet loose from the heavy steel chain which bound him and hurled his bulk against a wall of the building, sending timbers flying and smashing the wall. He then proceeded with thoroughness to demolish that side of the structure and pushed through to the out-of-doors.

Trickery was employed in recapturing the animal while thousands of persons looked on. Steel cables were fashioned into nooses, one end attached to heavy trucks. Hay was spread over the noose and Tusko was persuaded to step into them. The trucks were started and the astonished animal found himself fettered once more.

HoversAidGrandchildren Greet White House Santa

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—The President and Mrs. Hoover spent most of Christmas Day acting as spokesmen for a rotund Santa Claus who appeared at the White House early and then vanished—as the gift bringer has a way of doing.

Probably they explained his disappearance to young Peggy Ann Hoover and the younger Peter by pointing out that Santa had a good deal of work to do and could not linger, even at the executive mansion.

With reminders of his early morning visit, however, the Hoover grandchildren were satisfied Santa had been good to them.

He brought Peggy Ann two dolls, an electric stove and tiny cooking utensils to match and a pair of roller skates.

Peter's presents were more to masculine taste. They also included roller skates but there the duplication of his sister's gifts ended. He got a toy airplane, a tractor and a bag of marbles.

All officialdom followed the example of the President in aiding, abetting and explaining the comings and goings of the one and only Santa.

NEEDY SHARE IN CHRISTMAS JOY OF DISTRICT CELEBRATION

SANTA 'ADOPTS' DESTITUTE FOR DAY

Even Jail Inmates Have Party As Yule Spirit Prompts Many Charitable Actions

Christmas stockings hung in tens of thousands of homes yesterday while the spirit of Santa Claus hovered over the city and its environs. While many suffered, relief was extended to thousands of persons.

Thousands of "down-and-outers" found refuge in the shelters of city charitable institutions, while children and their parents, suffering from unemployment conditions, were recipients of the benefactions of the warm-hearted.

Father James R. Cox, at Old St. Patrick's Church, gave 4,735 baskets, the Salvation Army 2,000, Volunteers of America 1,500, political organizations in the Fifth, Seventeenth, Fourth, Third and other wards and boroughs distributed thousands of baskets to the poor.

SYRIA SANTA CLAUS

The Syria Temple Santa Claus sent out 5,000 bundles of toys and delicacies, while the Helping Hand, Parting of the Ways Home and Improvement of the Poor furnished special dinners for the needy.

The glory of Christ's birthday was the subject of church services throughout the district. Midnight masses were sung in many Catholic churches, while services with special music marked other churches.

The Variety Club, composed of showmen of the district, presented the club's ward, Catherine Variety Sheridan, 4, with a Christmas party and many gifts in the new club rooms, 619 William Penn way. John H. Harris was chairman and James Balmer "Santa Claus."

CATHEDRAL PAGEANT

Children of Pittock were guests of Hose Company No. 2, while employes of the H. J. Heinz Company were guests of H. J. Heinz Christmas Eve. The annual Christmas pageant was presented Christmas Eve in Trinity Episcopal Church.

Children from the Castle Shannon and Mollenaur tent cities spent the day in various homes in Mt. Lebanon—"adopted" for the day. A relief committee of the borough, headed by Mrs. Agnes R. Joyce, took them to homes where they became part of the families and felt the benevolence of Santa. Gifts, turkey dinners and other delicacies were theirs for the day.

Inmates at County Jail were entertained with speeches by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg, United States Commissioner Roger Knox and Attorney Louis Little. Vaudeville acts were provided by Smith and Sheehan, Allan and Gorman, Huston and Gray, Johnny and Bobby O'Brien, Peggy Daugherty, Jayne Jarrells and her Gypsy Troubadours and the Johnson Sisters.

DAVIES PARTY GIVES CLINIC CHILDREN JOY

2,500 Meet Santa, Receive Many Gifts, as Guests Of Film Star at Studio

Universal Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 26.—Marion Davies gave Santa Claus a mighty big order yesterday when she invited 2,500 children from her clinic in Sawtelle as guests for her annual Christmas party.

This year's affair was the largest ever held for the clinic children and the distribution of toys, clothing and turkey baskets required all the resources available at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, where the party was given on a block-long sound stage.

The stage was converted for the day into a fairyland in which Santa Claus, again impersonated by Sidney Jarvis, veteran stage and screen character actor, reigned supreme.

Santa was enthroned upon a rostrum next to a towering Christmas tree, illuminated with hundreds of colored lights against a background of a toyland that gave promise of the veritable warehouse of toys and gifts behind the scenes. It was a very modern Santa Claus. He had a telephone connection with the Polar regions from which he now and then gleaned information concerning the entertainment and progress of his airplane and reindeer sled of toys.

In addition to the scooters, wheelbarrows, dolls, roller skates, baseball bats, gloves and other toys, 750 Christmas baskets were given to the needy families represented in the throng gathered at the studio gates since early morning. All the children were shouting and happy as they left the party with their Christmas toys, but it was more often with tears that their parents took the 50-pound baskets of food that were distributed.

Santa Claus was dismayed to find a small replica of himself walking about the stage. Jimmy "Schnozzle" Durante came to Santa's rescue by jerking the whiskers off the diminutive impostor, who was revealed as Jackie Cooper, boy picture star.

Prisoner Builds Glider, but Not For Flight

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Dec. 26.—(INS.)—The familiar refrain was changed here today to read: "If I had the wings of a glider."

Through the cells and corridors of the Federal Penitentiary ran whisperings about an ingenious inmate who sang "The Prisoner's Song," substituting the glider for the angel.

But the song was ended today and the melody lingering on was merely the denial of prison officials that the glider was built for flight over the institution's walls. The authorities maintained that the plane was no more than a model, incapable of carrying inmates to freedom.

DUQUESNE CLUB ARCHITECTURE UNUSUAL

Courtyard Solves Problem Of Pleasant Outlook In Downtown District

By PENELOPE REDD

Pittsburgh is frequently described by visiting commentators as the most masculine of American cities.

Inevitable, itinerant critics miss the majesty of Pittsburgh which is masked by a diffident exterior.

Penelope Redd

Never before has this been more adequately shown than in the new addition to the Duquesne Club.

Typical of Pittsburgh is the fact that a major building operation progressed to completion without the thousands that daily pass the Duquesne Club's Sixth avenue facade being aware of the transformation.

One literally happens upon a new structure that appears to have been rooted for generations. The new blends with the old.

The Duquesne Club might well adopt Queen Elizabeth's motto, "Semper eadem," "always the same."

DIFFICULT PROBLEM

In this building Janssen and Cocken, the architects, were obliged to solve a quite different problem than the usual 10-story urban structure.

The main problem was to adjust the interiors to provide light and air and to eliminate visually the adjacent, unprepossessing surroundings. An interior court upon which all the rooms faced was the logical solution.

The courtyard, essentially but a well, was rendered eloquent by the skill of the designer who transformed a prosaic outlook into unwonted beauty. The visitor will say, "a bit of old world," because beauty derived from order is rare in the individualistic new world.

The courtyard invites the spectator to browse in an atmosphere redolent of the Italian renaissance. He may conveniently be abroad while at home.

The innumerable sculptured details of the courtyard will divert a contemplative club member, while a fountain and great jars filled with ivy and groups of green chairs strike a lighter, brighter note for those who but glance in passing.

COURTYARD IS KEY

This courtyard is really the key of the entire atmosphere of the club. It was organized as a club for men and it has retained that as its most salient characteristic through many changes in modes and manners.

The courtyard will certainly be famous beyond Pittsburgh for its distinguished beauty.

Janssen and Cocken were confronted with a more formidable problem in the arrangement of the interior of the building.

They rejected the gorgeous. They have not rivaled a public hostelry, but have chosen to evoke the elegance of a dignified home. Not a single feminizing irrelevance intrudes.

The rooms are planned in informal relation without useless corridors or grand staircases. In spirit, they hark back to the expression of intimate formality which culminated during the English Renaissance in the work of Inigo Jones, Christopher Wren, and the Adam brothers.

Tetrazzini Returns, Happy At Row of Managers

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—Chuckling over the fact that "three managers are fighting over me," Mme. Luisa Tetrazzini, famous Italian singer, returned to America today with an announcement she has had all she wants of grand opera.

She is coming back to the American concert stage after an absence of 10 years. As the Leviathan neared dock, she told reporters:

"I have one grand passion. That is for America."

Then she pulled from her handbag a small silk American flag, a souvenir of her last visit here. She was unable to say when her first New York appearance will be.

Also aboard was Samuel Dushkin, violinist, who made his debut with the New York Symphony Orchestra six years ago. He brought back with him a new concerto by Stravinsky, which he will play with the Boston Symphony Orchestra January 1 and the Philadelphia symphony January 5.

Another Leviathan passenger was Smaranda Braescu, Rumanian aviatrix, who claims the women's altitude record for a parachute jump with a drop of three and a half miles, and who might try to better that record at Miami, Fla.

'Chute Saves Dazed Pilot As Mail Plane Plunges

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 26.—(AP.)—Another day's work done, Jimmy Johnson enjoyed Christmas to its fullest at home with his family here.

On Christmas Eve, Johnson rode his crippled, plunging mail plane down 12,000 feet before taking to his parachute.

His first intimation of danger, Johnson said, came when he heard a sound "like the smashing of a box" and saw his left wing hurtle off. He said:

"My head must have been thrown against the side of the cockpit with enough force to daze me, for although I could pull the throttle back, I wasn't able to locate the switch. Then the other wing broke off. I tried to unfasten the catch of the safety belt, but my hands wouldn't respond.

"How I got the belt open I don't know, but people on the ground told me afterward that they saw the wingless fuselage come out of the clouds 2,000 feet off the ground and that I was just getting out.

"My parachute drifted to a landing in a field about a mile from where the plane crashed . . . a farmer wished me a 'Merry Christmas.' But, anyway, the mail wasn't harmed."

BLOUSES RETURN TO NEWEST MODE

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Dec. 26.—Blouses bloom in the light of increased favor. A few years back, most wardrobes did not contain a single blouse. Such garments were considered a sartorial anachronism, not at all in keeping with the modern wardrobe. But gradually, the blouse has come back and when we compare the present models with the type of thing that we used as a blouse before it isn't surprising that we have taken to our hearts with renewed affection that most useful and charming item of dress.

* * *

NOT ONLY WITH suits but with coats do we wear the separate skirt and blouse, a very nice alternative to the frock, and allowing for much diversity. Tailored blouses for sports wear to frivolous affairs for afternoon decoration right to the now popular evening blouse for wear under bright lights, all these have found their niche in the mode of today. The blouse allows for so much novelty in fabric, cut, design and detail, that several models will quickly brighten up a wardrobe at a reasonable cost. Almost every type and design is permissible, which is a good idea.

* * *

SKETCHED TODAY are two blouses typical of what is being worn by the smart Parisienne. First is a hand-knit blouse of wool lace from that new house that has won instantaneous success, Vera Borea. The model is done in fine white shetland wool with a delicate flower pattern and ribbed lower sleeves, thus combining the pretty with the practical. The lower sketch is of a blouse worn by a member of a smart luncheon party at the Grand Vatel. It is of bright green crepe marocain and the toothed edges of the applied bands and of the peplum constitute an effective trimming. The bands at each side simulate a bolero and the blouse is fastened in front with a tiny bow.

Columbia's Funds Gain $28,000,000

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—Gifts and benefactions to Columbia University during the school year 1930-31 increased by more than $28,000,000 the school's capital resources, it was announced today by President Nicholas Murray Butler.

He made the announcement in his annual report in which, while expressing satisfaction with the financial success of the university during a trying year, he decried what he termed "a steady decline in the practice of good manners" on the part of students.

Ina Claire Denies She'll Rewed Gilbert

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(INS.)—Ina Claire today improved upon a world-famous wisecrack made by Mark Twain. The latter, you recall, informed he was reported dead, remarked "the report is greatly exaggerated." She said:

"The report that I am going to remarry my divorced husband, John Gilbert, isn't exaggerated; it is just downright incorrect. I don't intend to remarry anybody, today, tomorrow, next month or ever."

TOYS CHEER 50 IN HOSPITAL

The hearts of 50 inmates of the Children's Hospital were made happy on Christmas Day by gifts of quaint hand-made wooden animals, carved and painted by South Side children.

The wooden toys were made by children of a dozen different nationalities, creeds and races at the summer vocational school of the First Ukrainian Church, 1005 Carson street, South Side, under the direction of the Rev. D. Halenda.

For 10 years these children have spent the month of July making toys for children who have to spend Christmas in hospitals.

Half of the 100 toys made are given to the South Side Hospital and the other half to the Children's Hospital.

PLANNERS FLAY WABASH DEAL

The Wabash tunnel as a traffic tube was condemned by the City Planning Commission in a letter to the County Planning Commission, it was learned today.

The letter, in which 10 reasons for the abandonment of the project was outlined, was recorded without comment by members of the county group, although it was said to have created considerable resentment.

The city group gave as its principal reasons for objecting to the purchase of the tube that it is not one of the highways most needed and conflicts with the inter-district traffic system for the triangle, luring traffic into the section before means are available to clear out 40 per cent of present traffic.

'Vinegar Tree' in Alvin Has Mary Boland and Plenty of Fun

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

The first love is the only real lasting love, if we may accept the opinion of Laura Merrick, played with genuine sparkle by Mary Boland in "The Vinegar Tree," which made the fag end of Christmas anyway merry for a holiday audience in the Alvin last night. But it may be just as well to accept Mrs. Merrick's opinions with justified reservations, since she is a lady who could be wrong in many things. Especially words, similes and the like, for she refers to Holbein with Malapropian naivete as Holstein, says she will swear to a statement on the table and puts distant things as far apart as Alpha and Beta.

AN IMAGINARY IDOL

But the outcome of the action of "The Vinegar Tree," furnishes a still stronger case against the infallibility of the charming Mrs. Merrick as a guide for it reveals that she has nourished in her heart for the 20 years of her life a romantic idol that is of her own fervid imagination, and it is plenty fervid as well as fertile. But it all makes a very full bill which oversteps the bounds of the mere comedy classification, and gets down to high class farce which is acted to the hilt as the saying is and makes one laugh uproariously most of the time whereas one really ought to blush—at least a little even in these days of sophistication—some of the time.

A GUSHING WOMAN

But the audience can't help adoring the gushing Mrs. Merrick. She becomes a delightful infection in Miss Boland's portrait of a woman who after 20 years of happily married life believes she can recreate the youthful charms of her girlhood and rekindle a flame that had gone out forever when she chose to forget one man and wed another. Her attempt to do so involves amorously not only herself but her sister, the latter's admirer, her daughter and the latter's fiance. If that isn't farcical imagine a situation more so.

Miss Boland's personality of course aids in making the depiction so shining conspicuous but the cameo has a fine setting reflecting the art of H. Reeves-Smith, a grand actor of the old school. Frederick Worlock, Jean Shelby, Helen Brooks and Alan Campbell.

EXCELLENT ACTING

Mr. Reeves-Smith is especially compelling of admiration in the portrayal of Mr. Merrick making him cynical, but human, bluntly growling frank opinions that are not flattering with a general air of indifference that is the height of comedy. Mr. Worlock as the center of the romantic criss-crossings, makes it all believable and adds much to the fun of the complications by an honest, natural impersonation of a man in a difficult position.

Miss Brooks and Mr. Campbell both do exceedingly well in roles representing the "young love interest."

Enright Gets La White

Sheridan Has Vaudeville

The Sheridan Square after several weeks of darkness has reopened featuring a bill of screen entertainment and R-K-O stage vaudeville.

The current film is "Way Back Home," featuring the radio character, Seth Parker and his other associates of the air. It is melodrama with a twang of Griffith's "Way Down East" to it. It was seen in the Warner a month or so ago, at which time the critics were kindly disposed to it.

The vaudeville bill presents a variety of acts including song and dance teams and comedians.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

PEIPING, Dec. 26.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Had a long talk with the young Marshall Chang Si Liang. He was the war lord of Manchuria (and all Manchuria spoke English) and was a very pleasant young fellow. One thing you got to say about these Chinese—they are good losers. There is no yapping or excuses. He thinks that China will eventually absorb the Japanese the same as they absorbed the Mongolians who captured China so much they got tired.

Yours, WILL.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

"IF YOU find this fit for publication," writes George Breeder, "a gentleman named John F. will finally learn why he recently received six months in jail. The sentence came as a terrific shock to him, and he still doesn't understand why a magistrate who was so wonderful to him on one occasion was so nasty on the next. Let him read on, and weep.

"Several weeks ago John's wife had him brought to court for beating her while he was drunk. The magistrate, one of the kindliest men on the bench, listened carefully to her story. And let me tell you that her story was such a sobby affair that even you might hesitate to write it. I said might.

"In a few words she asserted that her husband had not been able to find work for a long time and that he had been drinking heavily to forget his miseries. More there was no money in the house and their two children were facing starvation. Still more if you can stand it, the landlord was threatening them with a dispossess unless they paid some rent immediately.

"The judge was tremendously moved by the simple story. He leaned forward and reached into his pocket.

"Mrs. F.," he said, 'I'm going to do something for you that I do not encourage in my courtroom. I am going to take up a collection, and I am going to contribute $25 toward helping you out. Just do me one favor. Don't thank me too much.'

"All of which Mark gives you a rough idea of what a grand guy that judge really is. Before he was through, he turned over $60 and some change to Mrs. F., and topped it off by getting her four tickets for Thanksgiving dinners at one of the Broadway restaurants. Then he turned to the husband.

"'I'm going to suspend sentence on you,' he said, 'and I want you to go out and get yourself a job. I've tried to give your family a little start. The least you can do is carry on. And don't give me any of your thanks. Just try and be decent in the future.'

"I should say it was about a week later that the judge's wife returned home in a very nervous condition. She had taken their little car and gone downtown to do some shopping. When she attempted to park, a man who was driving another small car pulled out suddenly and dented one of the fenders. She had tried to talk to him, but he had grown most abusive, and had suddenly driven off.

"He was the freshest man I ever heard,' she complained, and his language was terrible. If there had been a policeman around I certainly would have had him arrested. But I did get his number.

"'Can you do anything about it, honey? I'd love to see that man get what's coming to him.'

"You probably know the answer before I can write it. The judge attended to the matter the following morning by sending one of his men to dig up the name of the owner of the offending car. And the name proved to be that of the same John F.—— who had been befriended by the court only a week before.

"The magistrate had accepted the woman's story without question before. But now it was a different situation. He had the family investigated completely. And to his amazement, he learned that they were in fairly comfortable circumstances—and that the husband even drove a little car that he owned in his own name.

"Just when he was wondering what steps to take, he was saved all the trouble. In walked the same woman and the same husband. Moreover, she registered the same complaint. Her motive evidently was a second collection.

"The magistrate was very sweet about the entire matter. He said nothing about the real trouble, and even the court reporters do not know why he experienced such a sudden change of heart. He merely smiled down at the woman.

"'So he has been beating you again, has he?' he inquired.

"'Yes, your honor,' returned the woman, 'and we're worse off now than we were before.'

"The judge shook his head.

"'Tch, tch, tch,' he muttered, 'that's too bad. But this is the holiday season, and I suppose I should understand. Would you like me to take up another collection?'

"The woman nodded swiftly. A happy light came into the husband's eyes.

"'All right,' cried the magistrate, 'your husband now has a collection of six months on the island. Take him away, officer. Next case.'

"Poor John F——. I'll bet that, over in his cell, he is absolutely convinced that that judge is just a little bit crazy."

* * *

AND THEN they tell the story of the two revenue men who were assigned to investigate a certain house in the West Fifties. Some one had phoned in a tip that bootlegging and drinking were being done at this address. And here were two of the boys on official duty.

Arriving at the premises, one of the revenue men turned to his partner.

"Listen," he said, "I'll step inside and interview the owner. You stay out here and cover the outside. We'll do this job thoroughly. Prohibition is the law of the land and we must do our share to enforce it. If this bird is violating the law in this house, we'll give him plenty."

The second revenue man nodded agreeably. He was older in the game than his partner. He had heard this stuff before.

The ambitious one rang the bell. The door was opened and he stepped inside. Fifteen minutes went by. Thirty minutes. An hour. Finally the door opened and the first revenue man joined his partner.

"Well," asked the second one, "what happened?"

The second one shook his head sadly.

"The owner in there," he responded, "is one of the finest men I ever met. To accuse him of selling liquor is an absolute crime. I never spoke with a more thorough gentleman in my life."

"That's the one sad thing about prohibition. It makes suspects out of some of the finest folks in America. No liquor is being sold in there. Absolutely none. And the owner is an absolute prince."

The first one glanced at his watch and stifled a yawn.

"That's okay with me, partner," he murmured tiredly, "but it's getting a little late. Give me half of what he gave you and let's be on our way."

Screen In Davis Keeps 'Frankenstein'

"Frankenstein," the picture about the fellow who creates a human monster and is almost destroyed by it, begun a second week in the Davis yesterday. Incidentally, this is the third consecutive week of the film's run downtown, it having moved into the Davis after an engagement in the Stanley. Colin Clive, the movies' Captain Stanhope of "Journey's End," plays the creator and Boris Karloff, a fellow of the Lon Chaney type, portrays the created one.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Monday night the Nixon will emerge from its recent state of suspended animation and show a lot of it. At least, there should be a lot of it in a play with such a title as "The Animal Kingdom," which will have its premiere in the Nixon, with Leslie Howard as the star. Mr. Howard also is associated with Gilbert Miller in the production of the play, which is a new one by Philip Barry. Mats. Wed., Fri., Sat.

Small Timer says that on the stage and screen villains always are stung, but they seem to thrive in real life.

The Warner is another theater that begins a new bill today, with Ben Lyon and Rose Hobart in the featured film, "Compromised," and, as an added attraction, the Douglas Fairbanks travelogue, "Around the World in Eighty Minutes."

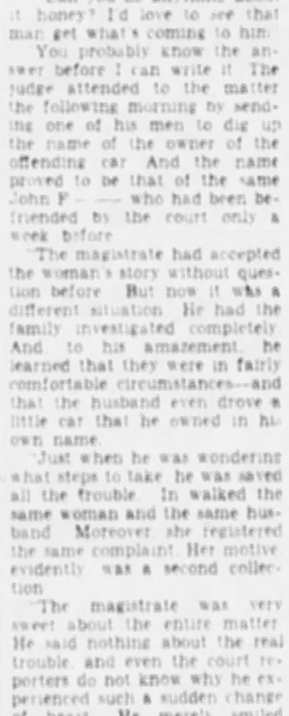
Cinderella



Janet Gaynor again is the Cinderella girl who wins the handsome and rich boy in "Delicious," Fulton picture.

Love Climbs The Alps In Penn

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Norma Shearer, who always is an attraction, and Robert Montgomery, a nice young man, are co-starred in "Private Lives," holiday week feature in the Penn.

This is a film version of Noel Coward's comedy, seen not so long ago in the Nixon. It has to do with a divorced couple. The individuals meet up with each other while on second honeymoons and find they shouldn't have married other mates.

It develops into a series of high class petting parties and quarrels between Miss Shearer and Mr. Montgomery.

In putting the play on the screen the movie-makers have turned it into a comic and romantic travelogue. The principals ride about in English airplanes, French trains and Swiss cable cars. They make love dangling from ropes on the side of the Alps and quarrel in a mountain cabin. They wreck more furniture in two minutes than Mack Sennett wrecks in two reels.

However, it is a smart, gay and amusing picture. There are good performances by La Shearer, Mr. Montgomery, Reginald Denny and Una Merkel. And the director puts over some delicate stuff with a delicacy that is nothing less than an art.

On the stage is a presentation titled "Jade." It isn't so special. The Kitaro Japs, acrobats; Ross and Edwards, funny fellows, and the Rodion Dancers are among the features.

The Penn Concert Orchestra is in the pit.

Fulton Has Musical Film

"Delicious," a happy sort of musical film, is the new feature in the Fulton. It co-stars Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell. It is enhanced by George Gershwin's music, with his "New York Rhapsody" the big feature.

The story is that of the little Cinderella girl who gets the handsome, rich boy. Janet is an immigrant girl who has trouble in getting into this free country of ours. You know she's Scotch because her movie name is Heather Gordon.

Charles is the rich boy. He plays polo and is engaged to marry a high-toned lady. When he sees Janet in a cabaret he begins to believe in love at first sight.

In cabaret sequences Janet's eyelashes are made up like a Japanese parasol.

El Brendel puts in the comedy. When an immigration official, by the name of O'Flynn, admits he made a mistake, Brendel makes the retort comical:

"Your father made a big one, too."

2 Railway Men Die In Boiler Explosion

Our Diplomats' Notes Are Now at Best Just Notes

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

There was a time when a diplomatic note had a pre-war kick to it.

But since the League of Nations started scattering grocery circulars around the world, a note is like a weather report. Guesses everything and guarantees nothing.

There was a time when a note meant either war or peace.

We refer you to the Lusitania document, the Semmes affair, and the Maine and good old 54-40 or fight.

Japan has collected enough League of Nations letterheads to use for paper napkins for their entire army.

They're still ballyhooing all over Manchuria while the league sinks as slowly and has dignifiedly as a tea ball in a rare old porcelain cup.

The league should sue those birds. It's a clear case of unrequited correspondence.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

(Copyright, 1931, Daily Mirror, Inc.)

Dear Walter Winchell: I know that you don't conduct a "problem" column, but don't you think it's about time someone took a dig at the boss who is making life miserable for thousands of terrorized employes? Can't something be done to make these bosses realize that employes are quite as human as the employer, his wife and children?

Being a stenographer is bad enough without having to face the chronic scowl of a boss who becomes insulting when his stenographer punctures his pride by correcting his punctuation.

Aren't bosses who insert ads like the following:

WANTED: Stenographer, not over 25 years old. Must have some college education and at least two years' experience. Accuracy, speed, personality and good appearance essential. Salary, $13.

unwittingly putting into cold storage snubs for themselves? What if the girl selected from the mob of applicants turns out to be a potential Vina Delmar or Ann Harding? It will serve such a boss right if the girl refuses even to autograph a photograph for his desk.

Lowly as the stenographer's profession is, from it (may I be trite and repeat, despite it?) many women have risen to prominence.

With apologies to you, W. W., it's men like the above mentioned employers who literally kick their employes up the ladder. Even in this day it seems incredible that any man should dare to make so many demands for $13 a week. He asks for (and gets) a girl who has spent four years in high school, at least two in college, another year at a business college, and then two years in training, and he offers her $13 a week. PROVIDED she has good looks, good clothes, personality, intelligence, and other minor afflictions such as a musical voice, discretion, and, of course, pretty hands.

In exchange for her clerical services, her decorative value, her education and former training, her capacity to accept minor and major abuses, depending on the vagaries of the major domo's temperament, not to mention her tact which prompts her to greet Mrs. Boss (who always comes in at the wrong time) with a bellowing "How do you do, MRS. BOSS," and engage her in several forced rounds of conversation while the old grouch opens the door to his Private Office so that by the time his wife storms in she will think the very attractive young woman at the non-executive side of the desk is discussing business . . . the stenographer is rewarded with $13 at the end of the week.

Subtract the price of lunches and car fare and you'll find that the $13 a week stenographer has less than $9 left. Out of this sum she must allow for at least one pair of hose that she tears at her desk, which is another $1, and, let someone wiser than this stenographer attempts to be, tell a girl who is young, attractive, alive and probably popular, how she can pay her room rent and board, buy soap so that she can do her own laundry, treat herself to a much needed pair of gloves, a hair trim, buy face powder, cold cream, witch hazel, toothpaste, an occasional bit of clothes, to say nothing of gum and ciggies (we simply must have our ciggies—they keep a stenographer's throat fit for the task of meeting the countless people who come into offices)—for less than $9 a week.

The burden of poverty could be lifted if the boss were less depressing, but it is invariably the driving boss who will ask "the girl" to bring back some drinking glasses when she's out to lunch, and not only forget to pay her the dime when she returns, but scold her for taking 40 minutes instead of the allotted 30. He is the kind of boss who fails to say "good morning" mumbles when he is dictating, growls if the stenographer dares to make a telephone call, and will not even pretend an apology when he finds the letter from Brown Bros., which, he has been telling the girl, between closed teeth, has vanished through her carelessness, has been, as the almost prostrate stenographer tried to tell him, in the top right-hand drawer of his desk. (If he'd only leave that damned desk unlocked once in a while, she'd find everything he says she's lost).

And if the frightened stenographer looks as though at last she is going to assert herself, the boss intercepts that outburst with:

"There are plenty of girls who'd be glad to have this job."

Remembering the army of girls who were waiting with her that day she was interviewed, the stenographer realizes that while an argument might satisfy the soul, it is the body that demands nutrition first.

Thus the underdog is born or life bear is lashed into action and it is the wise boss who will remember Dorothy Parker's observation: "Elephants and women never forget."

Some girls, with a practical eye, begin casting about for a husband and are often rewarded with a mate whose money and kind heart stand them in better stead than the dream of the more romantic sister who will not abandon her desk unless true love calls.

But what about the ambitious stenographer?

In this age of retaliation which has nurtured numerous "Ex" books, might not a "dark horse" stenographer burst forth with an "Ex-Stenographer" volume?

It shouldn't be much of a task, for haven't many bosses forced unpleasant notes in the memories of their stenographers . . . notes that would require but little concentration or memory racking to transcribe?

And the dedication could be so simple:

"To my bosses whose selfishness, pettiness, grouchiness and general unpleasantness made me so mad I had to do something . . . hence this book.

"A STENOGRAPHER."

Stage, Screen In Stanley Good

By MILDRED FILLMORE

The Stanley made it a merry Christmas yesterday by offering a merry film and a merry stage presentation, with Dick Powell mastering those ceremonies as of old, and Jean Harlow, the platinum blonde original package, as a highlight of the stage offerings. The folks had their curiosity satisfied in seeing Jean in the "flesh" and their entertainment hunger more than satisfied in seeing a new screenite in the shadow, this satisfying shade being that of Sidney Fox, as clever a little comedienne as has come to our notice in many a day.

FILM NOT SO DARING

She, along with Lewis Stone and Paul Lukas are prominent in "Strictly Dishonorable," made from the stage play of the same title by Preston Sturges. The film lacks much of the "daring" that characterized the play, consequently it suffers some loss of comedy of situation, as compared with the stage production. On the other hand, it shows greater breadth of action and also has a little the better of it in comedy characterization.

Sidney Toler, for instance, as Mulligan, the cop, gets a great many more laughs out of his depiction of his search for the West Orangeman than the stage Mulligan did. And Lewis Stone, in another of his flawless portrayals, makes Judge Dempsey vivid as a kindly worldly-wise, human individual with a real sympathy for a little girl who found herself in a strange situation when she bid her fiance good-bye forever—in a speakeasy—after she saw Paul Lukas.

SIDNEY IS A WINNER

But it is the little girl, Sidney Fox, who gets into your good graces as no other newcomer to the screen has in a long time. She's cute and she can act and her Southern accent appears to be just about perfect to a Northerner who never was south of the National Pike. Paul Lukas also is just about right as the opera singer who steals the little gal's heart.

Besides Miss Harlow, the stage features include Shaw and Lee among the goofiest of comics, one of whom looks like the curse of a haunted house. They never smile, but the audience howls. Worthy and Thomas are dancers, Bee Hee and Rubyiatte and the 16 prancers are in evidence, too.

TELL IT TO SALLY -:- -:- Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day -:- -:- By SALLY MARTIN

Too Many Parents Want to Boss Children's Lives

She was an only child, and from this point on the plot thickens rapidly—an only child, pretty and bright and gay and the pride of her fond parents' hearts.

From the day she arrived, they planned big things for her. She should have everything in the world they could possibly give her—parties, lovely clothes, all the pretty fripperies and foolishness dear to the heart of a girl.

And then some day, when she'd played around to her heart's content, she should marry some big butter 'n egg man, and he would go on spoiling her where they left off.

Yes, indeedy! It was a gorgeous plan.

MARRIED POOR BOY

But alas, one day Gracie met Angelo. Handsome laughing Angelo with a song in his heart and a spark in his eye but hardly a bean in his pocket.

But why should Gracie fret about financial rating as long as she could have youth and love and romance? Why indeed? She wanted her Angelo and when Gracie wanted something, she got it. So that was that. And that's how the war started.

And now, which side are you going to take?

"Dear Sally Martin:

"I am just a case-hardened old bachelor myself with no problems. But I want to tell you a story about a couple of youngsters I know and ask you what you think about it. I think it's an outrage myself. And I think something should be said about it.

"This morning while I was sipping my coffee in a restaurant, a fine young Italian boy I know came in. He is a clean, hardworking lad, with a barrel of 'it.' I noticed he looked miserable, so I asked him what the trouble was. Here's his story:

"It seems that he has married a very lovely and spoiled girl named Grace, the only child of doting parents who had planned big things for her in the way of marrying some rich man. But she upset their plans when she met Angelo, and that's where the trouble started.

BOTH DISOWNED

"He took her to meet his folks and they objected to her. He should marry Rosie. She was a prize housekeeper and cook, and father would give them a house, if he married her. But Angelo couldn't see it that way. He was in love. And anyway, what did cooking mean to a fellow who thinks all women are natural cooks as well as mothers?

"So Angelo's parents raved, and Grace's parents raved, but they got married anyway. They loved each other, and they had many things in common to make a real basis for a happy marriage.

"So Grace's parents disowned her, and Angelo's parents disowned him. Grace has been learning to cook. It is hard and exasperating work, and everything she does but misses being tasty. Dinner last night made him ill.

"And none of the home folks who talked so loudly about love ing their children are willing to lend a hand in any way. Instead, they're doing everything they can to make life harder for these two kids, who are struggling to make good together. I am so mad that I don't know what adjectives to use about the fathers and mothers of this 23-year-old boy and 20-year-old girl.

Grace is determined to be a true wife and home maker, but she is so pitifully ignorant! Why can't the respective mothers make up, stop their foolishness and help her to make a go of it?

I am going to do my part. I am inviting them to dinner, and my mother is going to show Grace a few tricks with pots and skillets.

But if I said what I thought about her mother and Angelo's, it would burn this paper. Why should a girl have to go to a comparative stranger instead of to her own mother, to get a break—just because she wouldn't let that mother boss her life?"

"PHIL OSPHER."

PARENTS FOOL THEMSELVES

That's a big letter, Phil, and I wish about a million fond but fretty parents could read it. It would be good for what ails them.

Grace's mother and dad, and Angelo's, too, don't intend to be horrid old meanies. They honestly believe that they love their respective children. They have gone through endless hardship and sacrifice for those children, would die for them if need be, and they sincerely convinced that they're thinking of the kids' good right now.

But they're fooling themselves. They aren't thinking of Grace and Angelo at all. They're thinking of a couple of pet-ted papas and mad mammas whose dreams have all gone glimmering.

Grace was to make her mamma's fairy tales come true. She, in the glamor her mother had missed, compensate Mamma for all her own disappointments and frustrations.

And Angelo was to do the same for his mother and daddy—give them a chance to build another home according to their hearts' desire, not his.

And now? Oh, horrors! Those ungrateful children have insisted on living their own lives, without any regard for their parents' ideas of romance. So the old folks are pouting like a quartet of spoiled infants, and "getting even" by refusing to lend a hand.

Well, parents will be parents! But don't worry, Phil. Just wait until the first baby comes along and see what happens!

BEAUTY SPEAKS FOR ITSELF -:- -:- Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"Beauty itself doth of itself persuade
The eyes of men without an Orator."
Shakes.

Is that what they mean when they say Beauty need not speak? Beauty needs no brains to help her clear her way through the world? Beauty can be "dumb" and yet devastate? Beauty just needs to look, and man reads in that look implications and dreams, intelligences, and depths that the Beauty knows not of? It seems to be one of those facts that we cannot talk away nor get around. To be beautiful is all some women need to be to gain all that women value. But you can say SOME ugly duckling, for you can put your finger upon the name and under the lovely face of many a beauty, who had little to say for herself, and let LOVE say that little, with tragedy in black type writing finis to her story.

Allowing one's face and manner to speak for themselves is not bad advice to any girl—even unbeautiful. There is a great deal of talk in the world, and the girl who does not do too much, seems to get along romantically, very, very well indeed! Let your eyes—and Love speak for you. He has boasted of, and boosted up, many a plain girl as well as the Beauty.

NELL BRINKLEY.

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Mary Plays Her Ace Card

Because," said Marion, with a gleeful little giggle, "the other boys keep her so busy that she can only give poor Noel half time."

I looked at Lillian's winsome young daughter with admiration tinged with amazement, but, I fear no criticism such as I know should have been mine for her outrageous fibbing. For she knew as well as I that this summer there had been no other men in Mary's life.

Oh! lovely fun!" Miss Arlen said again, and I surmised that it was one of her stock expletives. "Engaged on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays! What does Noel do on the other days?"

"Mocks around, usually watching Mary flirt with the other men." The impish dancing light in Marion's eyes told me that she was enjoying herself hugely.

"I should think she'd be afraid to leave him around like that." Miss Arlen apparently entered into the spirit of the game. "He's so awfully attractive."

"Yes, isn't he? I've often thought of trying to get him away from her, but I knew it wasn't any use. You might have a try, though. You're so different a type to Mary, he might fall for you."

Her tone was so smoothly insolent that I wondered the other girl did not catch it. But Avis Arlen had built around herself a wall of egotism so impenetrable that she could turn slurs into compliments, and she dimpled with satisfaction and then her face sobered.

"Oh, I think that would be terrible!" she said, "to take another girl's man away from her! I never have tried anything like that."

The implication was plain. It was only heroic restraint on Miss Arlen's part which kept any husband or sweetheart in his rightful place when she was in the vicinity.

"No?" Marion's tone held just enough of an upward inflection to make one uncertain whether it was meant assentingly or derisively. "You are probably wise, at that. But we are wasting all this music. Hank's just dying to dance this with you, Miss Arlen. I can see it in his eyes. Come on, Bill."

She deftly withdrew Bill from the arena, although there was no need of any lariats for Bill. Avis Arlen's charms had made no impression whatever upon him. All his boyish attention was focused upon Marion as it had been from the first moment he had seen her, and I gave a little sigh, for the inevitable disappointment which should be his when Marion's collegiate friends should come to the farmhouse.

To Avis Arlen's credit, there was no hint of chagrin in the brilliant smile she bestowed upon Hank. Noel, the only young man beyond school age in the room, was dancing with Mary, his eyes gazing hungrily at her beautiful sparkling face. Bill, not yet in college, but tall and looking like a college boy, was absorbed in Marion. The only masculine person left to her wiles was a boy, patently in the first stages of preparatory school. Yet her arm went around his neck as curvingly, and she cuddled as caressingly against him in the dance as if he had been 25 and the heir to a title and fortune.

Was it all saving face? I wondered, as I watched Hank uneasily, or did she consider no masculine game too young or too inexperienced for her wiles? As I saw the expression on Hank's face, I made a mental resolve that I should manage to make Miss Arlen's visits to the farmhouse as infrequent as possible.

Noel was doing penance, I reflected as I turned my eyes to him. That he was appealing to Mary for something, anyone could see as plainly as the fact that she was laughing at him, and parrying his seriousness with brilliant badinage.

At intervals he would stop dancing in his attempts to make her listen, but she always drew him back into the step again, as if she were a marathon dancer who feared to be caught motionless. I wondered if it were chance or design that brought her close to Miss Arlen when the dance closed.

"Hank, I'm proud of you," she said to her flushed and perspiring young brother as the music stopped.

"Why didn't you dance with me like that? Miss Arlen, you must be a marvel to bring Hank out like that. I want to see you dance again with a past master of the art—excusez moi, mon frere"—she smiled at her young brother—"you'll be that when you're as old as Noel. But," she turned back to Avis Arlen, "I do so want to see you dance with Noel."

"But I just danced with Noel," Avis Arlen said. "Didn't you see us?"

"Sorry," Mary said unblushingly, "but Hank kept me so busy I didn't get a chance to watch you. And this will be my last chance. I'm going away tomorrow."

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

'Check-Ups' Aid Health of Child

Mothers frequently write to ask if periodic health examinations are really important for their children. They cannot understand why a perfectly healthy child should be taken to a doctor.

It is important for children as well as for adults. When everybody realizes this, there will be an improvement in the general health. Such diseases as rheumatism, heart disease, kidney disease and many other disorders are checked if discovered early.

Many diseases are slow in action. It may be many years before they cause actual pain or discomfort, yet they may have been progressing for a long time.

In children this problem is even greater than in adults. Often children continue with their play and the eating of their food as if nothing had occurred.

During its infant stage, a mother is interested in the weight and progress of her child. She is eager to learn whether the measurements of the head, chest and abdomen are normal.

As the child grows older, and to all external appearances is healthy, the mother is apt to be less alert. Visits to the physician become less and less frequent. This is a mistake, because medical attention continues to be important.

The posture of the child should be observed. Faulty posture should be set right. Disturbances in nutrition which cause knock-knees, bowlegs or even flat feet, if detected at an early age, can be corrected.

Another problem which has received too little consideration in children is that of blood pressure. High blood pressure is seldom found in children, but low pressure is a common symptom. When it is discovered and early treatment is given, these frail, undeveloped children develop into sturdy, healthy individuals.

Examination of the urine gives information concerning inflammatory conditions which may exist in the kidney or elsewhere in the urinary tract. It may also point to chronic digestive disturbances. This examination also determines whether or not the child is drinking sufficient water.

I have heard many a mother say that her child is anemic. She makes this statement because the child appears pale. Examination of the blood is the only way to be sure about it. There are other disorders, too, that can be determined by a blood examination.

X-ray pictures are particularly important to determine some facts about children. By their use it is possible to visualize certain disorders in the body which otherwise might be overlooked.

I hope that I have given you sufficient reasons why periodic examinations are of value to the child. Please remember the object of such an examination is merely to take inventory of your child's health. It may locate some minor disorder which is easily and quickly cured.

Answers to Health Questions

L. J. M. Q.—What do you advise for hernia?

A.—In most instances operation is necessary to affect a cure.

BROOKLYN, Q.—What causes the toes to itch at night? They do not seem to bother me in the daytime.

A.—This may be due to ringworm, to eczema or to a nervous condition. Try to locate the cause and then proper treatment can be outlined.

E. J. Q.—What can be done for too prominent shoulder blades?

2.—How can knock-knees be corrected?

A.—This usually indicates poor development—try to gain in weight and be sure that your posture is correct. Systematic exercise in a gymnasium might be very helpful in this case.

2.—Consult an orthopedist for examination and advice.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Soft colors are best for the girl who has pale blue or grey eyes. Strong shades of blue or green make the eyes look colorless.

Local treatment of hollow cheeks consist in a general toning and tightening of the trumpeter's muscles, those heavy ones that extend downward from ear lobes to chin. Anoint with a heavy cream, spread out fingers and thumb pick up the tissues with a quick drawing movement. Tap with the finger ends from chin up to temple. After five minutes of brisk massage, place over the face a cloth which has been wrung out of ice water. Repeat several times.

A good chest and neck exercise is to draw in a deep breath and to send the head back slowly. Bring the head forward as the air is expelled from the lungs.

Looks as if a large portion of the army of inventors is turning its mind upon beauty appliances. Every day one hears about new gadgets. There is ice for rubbing the skin that isn't ice at all, but metal shaped something like an egg with a handle attached. You park it in the refrigerator, and it is ready for use at all times. Grand to slide over massage cream or to use as a freshening agent before the heavy date with the best feller.

OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

The Two-Club Convention

All things considered, The Official System appears to be the most simple and practical for the vast majority of players, without in the least being inferior in the hands of experts who after all often deviate widely from what they profess to follow. It is not enough, however, to thoroughly understand only a single system of contracting. Even if you never expect to team with a partner who uses some other type of forcing bid, at least you want to know what opponents mean when they employ a different type of demand bid from what you employ. Although not as popular as it once was, the Two-Club Demand is still widely used and it is also very efficient. The following excerpts on that form of demand are quoted from "Contract Bridge Standardized."

"By agreement an opening bid of 2-Clubs means 'Partner I hold at least 5 sure tricks with strength in not fewer than three suits, amounting to at least 7 probable tricks. My clubs may be strong or weak. Keep contracting open twice. Respond with 2-Diamonds in case you lack one sure trick (quick trick). Having at least one sure trick, show me a biddable suit declaring 3-Diamonds in case you must bid that suit from strength (the conventional 2-Diamond response shows a bust, perhaps no diamonds being held). Do not bid 2-Clubs unless that is your biddable suit. Declare 2-No Trumps to show your one sure trick and lack of a biddable suit."

The three hands below afford fair examples of holdings commonly utilized for opening bids of 2-Clubs as a demand that partner respond.

♠ A-Q-10-6-3 ♥ A-K-9-5 ♣ ♦ A-K-J-4
♠ ♥ A-K-10-7 ♣ K-Q-8-6-4 ♦ A-K-5-2
♠ A-K-7-4 ♥ A-K-8-6 ♣ 4 ♦ K-Q-J-6

For this particular use never count anything as sure tricks except first and second trick winners (quick tricks). Do not value for this purpose the A-Q as 1½ quick tricks or the K-X as ½ quick trick; count only A-K and K-Q for your 5 sure tricks. Also make certain that you can win at least 6 tricks in case partner holds a bust. There should be a minimum of 7 probable tricks for a conventional 2-Club Demand. No matter how weak your partner is, he must respond to your demand; you will again bid and again partner must respond; contracting is bound to go up to an absolute minimum of three-odd; your 7 probable tricks are sometimes needed to save you from a serious loss if doubled and facing a hopelessly weak partner. Monday we will continue this topic.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Addressing Form

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it correct to write both business and social addresses and headings in block form as well as in step form?

Are there any times when block form is not correct in any sense of the word?

R.

Either form—the block or step form—is correct. It depends entirely on which you prefer. The block form is, of course, more "modern," but I have always thought that the step form is more attractive, and, because indented, easier to read.

For a while several years ago the block form was more popular on social letters, in headings and on envelopes, than I believe it is now. One doesn't, I think, see it so often now on social letters, but I do not think of any times when it is not really correct.

Letter of Sympathy

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. If a girl borrows a book from a boy and returns it after a certain length of time, should she also send a little gift to show her appreciation for his kindness? If so, what are proper gifts?

2. My girl friend's father died. Is it proper for me to send my card with the word "sympathy" written on the face of it, or should I send a letter?

MISS C.

1. Best taste of all would be to write a charming note of appreciation for this kindness, and send this letter with the book. Do not send a gift.

2. To express sympathy to one so close in friendship, the card would not be enough. Write a warm-hearted letter of sympathy, assuring your friend of your love and devotion in her dark hours, and offering her your help.

Household Hints

Odds and ends of soap grated can be used up in hot water for cleaning.

When mixing pastry, a little lemon juice added to the water will make the pastry lighter and remove all taste of fat.

After washing cane chairs wipe them over with a cloth wrung out in rice water. This forms a skin over the cane and give it a nice gloss.

To clean decanters or carafes pour in a little vinegar with a little salt. Swill round, rinse in warm water and turn them upside down to drain.

Fruit will not sink in a cake if it is first rolled in flour and added to the mixture last.

A teaspoonful of turpentine added to the starch makes the linen glossy and the iron run smoothly.

Before using a brass kettle which has been put away for any length of time, the interior should be cleaned with salt and vinegar.

When washing new curtains or blankets, steep over night in salt and water. This will remove the lime, and consequently less soap will be required.

BERNIE HEADS RADIO 'ALL-STARS'

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

IMAGINE AN orchestra with Ben Bernie suavely performing as master of ceremonies, Guy Lombardo making the arrangements, Wayne King setting the waltz tempo, Duke Ellington injecting hotcha rhythm and Don Bestor's amiable dignity, and you have a composite picture, almost, of what Pittsburgh listeners prefer in dance music on the air. . . . Readers of "We Now Present" have co-operated handsomely in picking an all-star "gridiron" team of orchestra leaders for consideration by the Music Corporation of America. . . . We venture that at least five of the leaders selected by our readers will "make" the first team and that all of them will be represented on the first three teams. . . . Ben Bernie will captain the mythical eleven chosen by Pittsburgh radio fans. . . . "The Old Maestro" will call the signals also. . . . He had by far the largest number of votes.

Darrell V. Martin

Here's the way Pittsburgh's first team of "players" would look on the radio gridiron:

Guy Lombardo ..... Left end
Ted Weems ..... Left guard
Paul Whiteman ..... Center
Vincent Lopez ... Right guard
Coon or Sanders .. Right tackle
Jack Denny ..... Right end
Ben Bernie (C) .. Quarterback
Don Bestor ..... Left halfback
Jimmy Joy ... Right halfback
Duke Ellington ..... Fullback

* * *

Second team:

Gus Arnheim, Cab Calloway, Tom Gerun (C), George Olsen, Jan Garber, Rudy Vallee, Earl Burtnett, Horace Heidt, Husk O'Hare, Tom Waring, Leon Belasco.

Third team:

Bobby Meeker, Abe Lyman, Bert Lown, Art Kassel, Tweet Hogan, "Sleepy" Hall, Jimmy Greer, B. A. Rolfe (C), Larry Funk, Bernie Cummins, Ralph Bennett.

Fourth team:

Ferde Grofe (C), Jimmy Green, Hal Kemp, Phil Spitalny, Ted Lewis, Noble Sissle, Clyde McCoy, Leo Reisman, Dan Russo, Harold Stern, Jacques Renard.

* * *

There they are—the cream of radio orchestras as selected by Pittsburgh listeners. . . . Ten radio editors in the United States were asked to submit mythical "teams" for final consideration by the MCA board in Chicago. . . . We invited readers of "We Now Present" to pick our team, and we congratulate them on their judgment. . . . Look over that first team again and see if you could improve on it. . . .

Question a Day:

Is it ethical to stand up in one's home when "The Star Spangled Banner" is played over the radio? —Harriet J., Oakland.

Answer—No. The national anthem when played over the air or as part of a medley in public does not require the ordinary civil salute.

GLASS DEMAND STILL SLOW

Holiday season demand for flat glass is slow, as is usual, according to American Glass Review. There has been little movement of glass from factories and production is being curtailed as much as possible until January 4. While December always is one of the slow months of the year, sales of flat glass by producers this December were less than had been anticipated.

With one accord, the flat glass industry looks to 1932 and the prospects for January are by no means poor. In fact, the possibilities for demand in January are the bright spot on the present horizon.

During October and November, demand for flat glass increased markedly over the previous several months. However, while demand was good compared with the average in other months of the year, the price situation, with the exception of plate glass, became more demoralized than before. December's slow demand has given opportunity to consider more sanely the matter of prices, particularly in winodw glass, and ought to bring some strong resolutions for 1932.

Stock Exchange Topics

Wall Street Expects Steel Will Reduce Common Rate

The next meeting of Steel Corporation directors for action on the dividend will be held on January 26. Wall street believes that news out of the meeting both as it concerns earnings for the current quarter and the common dividend, will reflect conditions under which the corporation is operating. Some people are anticipating possible omission of the common dividend, but the more sanguine are expecting a reduction to a $2 annual basis, and the action of the stock offers a measure of support for the more conservative point of view. So far as earnings are concerned, any attempt to estimate at this early date would be difficult. Operations have been at a low rate through the quarter, and of late prices have weakened. But report has it that another credit entry is possible from profits realized on the sale of its Gary utility plant. Moreover, the lower wage scale in effect since October 1 will be a factor, and last, but not least, the usual year-end adjustment will be in order.

For the next week or more much will be heard of reinvestment demand which usually asserts itself with the approach of January 1. In recent years, that is prior to the collapse of the 1929 inflation movement, a part of such requirements was frequently anticipated through purchases during the last half of December. Wall street is now conjecturing the likely importance of this potential buying as a market factor in the weeks ahead, considering that due to dividend reductions and omissions it will be considerably reduced. It is believed such buying will be felt principally in the bond market.

On the theory that a large number of stocks have discounted the poor earnings for the current year and the prospects of only slight improvement in the early part of 1932, there are many students who contend that some of the pivotal shares are selling more "ex-confidence" than anything else. The liquidation which caused such large losses earlier this month reflected the fright of many investors brought about by the continued decline in securities. A return of only a little confidence would be necessary to increase the demand from those who have funds available.

Several commission houses are calling attention to the attractive yield which is obtainable on Brooklyn Union Gas around current levels. Because of the demonstrated earning power of the company in the past, it is contended the stock could be among the first to move forward with a better general market tone some time next year, particularly if the selling price continues at a level which gives a return of more than 6 per cent on the investment.

Wall street does not anticipate that Timken Roller Bearing added much, if anything, during the last half-year to the earnings of $1.20 per share reported for the first six months. Because of the fact there has been some talk that the directors may decide upon a further reduction in the dividend early next year. However, many believe that the price of the stock has already discounted such a possibility.

But four more trading days remain between now and the end of the year. Yet Wall street, though disappointed by the selling which asserted itself during the week, is still clinging to its hope that the year will close with prices at slightly better levels than now prevail. As against the selling which found a thin market on Wednesday, and in consequence forced prices back rather abruptly, the average observer professed to have been very satisfactorily impressed with the recurrence of buying of a substantial character, as the majority of leading stocks approached their previous low levels.

The Christmas Spirit Is Very Real This Year

—By B. C. FORBES—

WHILE SANTA CLAUS may have come less heavily laden, the real spirit of Christmas is in human hearts this season as seldom before.

Mr. Forbes

Prosperity, wealth, pleasure breed self-sufficiency, exclusiveness, callousness.

When life is flowing along like a song, we think only superficially.

When all is going delightfully well with us, we take little time to stop to ponder how others are feeling.

ADVERSITY humanizes.

Adversity broadens and deepens.

Adversity causes us to reflect.

Adversity makes us more sympathetic.

Never before in peace time has there been such an outpouring of help for the needy.

Never before have so many men and women given serious thought to the plight of others.

Never before has there been so much serious concern directed toward alleviating suffering.

CONTRAST PAST panics and depressions with events during the last two years.

Always heretofore it was accounted perfectly proper to dismiss employes wholesale without a twinge of conscience, without a pang as to what became of them.

The rule this time has been for employers to exert themselves to provide work for as large a number of breadwinners as possible. Instead of running plants solely with a view to maximum profit, or minimum losses, the aim in most instances has been to give every possible consideration to the well-being of workers.

There are organizations today with thousands drawing some measure of wages whereas all the available work could be done by hundreds working on full time.

As a people we have learned to share.

Surely, that is a worthy manifestation of the Christmas spirit, of "good will toward men."

HAPPILY, WE can reasonably look forward to happier times a year from now.

The tendency to brood on the dark side of things has been regrettably overdone. This tendency has served only to make matters worse.

The evils rivaling be given by extraordinary prosperity have been very thoroughly eradicated.

The pathway has been cleared for fresh, healthy progress. The new year should find us in very truth turning over a new leaf.

The land possesses all the essentials for rational business activity and employment except perhaps the will to be confidently ahead.

May calm reflection on the world's progress since the first Christmas bring a rebirth of faith and courage.

It should. Let us pray that it will.

INDIANA PLANS EUROPEAN GROWTH

Oil Company Expanding Abroad Against Expected Petroleum Tariff in U. S.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Looking to the possible enactment of a tariff on petroleum and petroleum products, Standard Oil Company of Indiana interests have been adding to the company's foreign outlets to provide a wider market for the company's Venezuelan production. Through its subsidiary, Pan American Petroleum and Transport Company, the company recently acquired a substantial interest in the Naphtha Industrie und Tankanlagen Aktiengesellschaft Company in Germany. The latter company is engaged largely in distribution of refined petroleum products which will be supplied from the Standard Oil Company of Indiana's Venezuelan holdings.

INTEREST IN "NITAG"

The "Nitag" company distributes, in round figures, about 420,000 barrels of refined petroleum products annually. While no figures are available, the Indiana interests are understood to have paid about rm 4,500,000, or at present rate of exchange, about $1,100,000 for their interest in the German concern.

Acquisition of an interest in this German marketing concern is the second important acquisition of foreign outlets by the Indiana interests during the current year.

ENGLISH PURCHASE

In April this year, the company completed arrangements for a 50 per cent interest in the Petroleum Storage and Finance Corporation, Ltd., of Manchester, England. At the time of the acquisition of this equity in the English company, the Indiana interests were reported to have contracted for delivery of approximately 30,000,000 gallons of refined products to the Petroleum Storage and Finance Corporation during the current year, with larger amounts being called for in ensuing years. These products are supplied from the Standard of Indiana's holdings in Venezuela.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

STEEL INGOT OUTPUT LOWER

January Upturn Expected To Be Less Than Usual; Prices Show Weakness

By B. E. V. LUTY

Steel ingot production through Thursday was at about 22 per cent, making the week's output about 18 per cent computed by the conventional system which counts out only 24 hours working time for the holiday whereas few steel making departments resumed for today. Next week will hardly average much more as New Years Day is likely to be largely observed although it is not a holiday by the steel mill calendar.

There is a sharp decline from the 30 per cent average of November but the November increase over October was unusual and due to special conditions. Comparison with the 27.76 per cent average of October shows a decline of smaller proportions which may be regarded as seasonal and therefore not indicating that anything fresh has gone wrong in the last two months.

1932 GAIN EXPECTED

In early January there will be less upturn than usual and this might be regarded as unfavorable but there is good ground for holding that on account of universal conservatism if not timidity the usual seasonal influence will simply be delayed a few weeks in producing results. February may behave much like January usually does. Ordinarily shipping orders for release immediately after January 1 pile up during December, whereas this time there is little accumulation.

For the early part of next year steel producers expect slow improvement rather than the sharp improvement that has usually occurred while for the year as a whole they expect more or less continuous improvement largely or wholly eliminating the familiar seasonal decline to a low July. Properly considered, prospects for the new year are much more favorable than would be indicated by the present low stage of activity or would be prompted by the accumulated mental influence of the last two years, for in point of time bad news has vastly preponderated over good news.

YEAR'S OUTPUT OFF

Finished steel prices have shown some fresh weaknesses but the cases are isolated and may easily be paraded too strongly. Mills remain very anxious to maintain, or restore, prices that ruled during the stabilized era which extended over a little more than the third quarter of this year. Despite recent weakness in shapes and plates, Pittsburgh mills are quoting the original price of 1.60c on bars, shapes and plates for first quarter but as to Chicago firming up to 1.70c there is only talk. The long prevailing differential of Chicago over Pittsburgh may disappear.

Steel ingot production of the year will total about 25,000,000 tons, the rate this month being about 18,000,000 tons a year. The very active seven-year period through 1929 showed an average of 45,750,000 tons. Capacity is now much larger, the next capacity ascertainment, for December 31, 1931, being likely to show more than 70,000,000 tons. Percentage rates of production reported during the year have been based on capacity of a year ago, slightly under 67,000,000 tons.

Manager

ROGERS NAMES SALES CHIEF

C. R. Rogers Company, Philco Radio representative in the Pittsburgh district, announces the appointment of Paul L. Chamberlain as sales manager. For four years Chamberlain was associated with the Grigsby-Grunow Company in Chicago, where he participated in the production and sale of Majestic radios.

Mr. Chamberlain came to Pittsburgh to join the executive staff of the Majestic distributor. However, he later resigned to take the new post with C. R. Rogers Company.

BANKER FAVORS SILVER USE

The recognition of silver as a purchasing power is suggested as a way out of the world depression by David S. Cooper, assistant secretary-treasurer of the Commonwealth Trust Company.

When one or two nations accumulate all the gold in the world and then refuse to do business with other nations except on a gold basis, trade is bound to reach a period of stagnation, Mr. Cooper declares. Nations as well as individuals are so tied up they can not make a start toward prosperity, Mr. Cooper believes.

He says:

"There is plenty of silver in the world. Nations without gold have silver. Recognize it as a purchasing power and the wheels of industry will start turning."

Mr. Cooper grants that silver as a medium of exchange would cause inflation. He believes, however, that the inflation would bring about a new level of values which would soon become standard.

Student Delegates To Open Conference

TOLEDO, O., Dec. 26.—(AP.)—Delegates to the seventh annual congress of the National Students Federation of America, with the University of Toledo as host, began arriving here last night. The congress begins Sunday and ends December 31. The delegates are from 350 universities in the United States and Canada. The Congress will close with a formal dinner dance New Year's Eve.

SCIENCE URGED IN ECONOMIC FORECASTING

Statistician Cites Value Of Trade Calculations On Mathematical Basis

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—As the open season for new year economic forecasts approaches, it is timely to inquire into the status of the art or science of economic soothsaying.

The batting average of forecasters has been especially low in this year of unpredictable upsets. But even before forecasting was still at best an inexact science. Astute investors and executives accordingly checked broad generalizations concerning the future against their own ledger experiences, recalling William James' admonition that when theory ran counter to common experience it was better to follow the latter because presumably the theory was faulty.

Mr. Rukeyser

Karl Karsten, New Haven statistician, reports in his new book entitled "Scientific Forecasting" his efforts to lift the art of forecasting above the realm of fortune-telling by means of the use of mathematical formulas.

OPTIMISTIC VIEW

Karsten takes an optimistic view of the future of forecasting. He concludes:

"In economic changes there is a certain element of human psychology which may prove impossible of measurement, and other causes—earthquakes and other 'acts of God'—will also operate to throw the events off from the forecasts. In the main, however, it would seem reasonsimilar to the degree of accuracy in economic forecasting similar to the degree of accuracy with which tide-movements are predicted in the tide tables.

"Of the practical value to humanity of such a science, it is not necessary to speak. We have been, as Karl Pearson pointed out, like blind men traversing rough country, able to tell precisely the ups and downs of the country we have trod, but unable to see ahead and tell whether the next step we take will be up-hill or down-hill.

"Indeed, the hazards of business due to unforeseen changes of the business cycle are at present so great as to levy upon the entire country a tax which affects every man, woman and child with an increased cost of living, and every business venture with an increased margin of necessary reserves.

"The piloting of business is as logical as the piloting of ships, and the statistical forecast will be as valuable to such pilots as the tide-table to the mariner, with a consequent increase of safety for passengers and crew. Such piloting of human affairs is the highest function of the statistician and the economist."

Under President Hoover's leadership, there has been a vast improvement in statistics in recent years, but they are not good enough yet, especially statistics of consumption and of stocks on hand.

FORECASTS NECESSARY

Imperfect as the business of forecasting may be, every executive and investor in his ordinary work must make forecasts. The manufacturer may make assumptions concerning the future prices of raw materials, the future of general business and demand, and the future tastes and preferences of consumers.

Success does not depend on perfect forecasting, but merely on a satisfactory batting average and capacity to correct blunders quickly. The buyer of securities must of necessity make assumptions concerning the future of interest rates, the future of general business, the future earning power of the company in question, and future fashions in investments.

The person who is unwilling to assume diversified risks is out of tune with our economic society and is in effect a economic drone.

Mental Balance Lacking On Business Questions

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

WE ARE IN ANOTHER NEW ERA. In 1929 there was much talk of a "new era" of prosperity, an era during which business would continue to expand, profits would steadily mount, stock values in anticipation of the assured growth of industry would continue to advance and wealth would come to everyone.

Judging from the general attitude prevailing at the close of this year we have a "new era" with us again. Prices will keep on falling, unemployment will increase and the country is headed for general starvation. There is just as much sense to our present "new era" as there was to the late new era of prosperity.

We are sadly lacking in mental balance so far as economics are concerned. Just how near we are to the end of the present situation is doubtful. But the belief that depression will be indefinite is as ridiculous as the belief that we had escaped the danger of panics was in 1929.

Perspective Needed

PERHAPS WE CAN ATTAIN a proper perspective on the business situation if we look backward. An outstanding member of a New York Stock Exchange firm has written:

"This period of liquidation and depression left Wall street and the country at large thickly sprinkled with poor rich men, capitalists with a good deal of property, real and personal, including stocks, but all unsalable in the market except at an almost ruinous loss. Their policy is naturally to hold on to what they have left till the tide turns, and if they are strong enough to be able to do this they will doubtless meet their reward. History repeats itself in Wall street as well as elsewhere, and with this prospect in view they can cheerfully say, as the old song goes, 'There's a good time coming, boys; only wait a little longer.'

"Meanwhile, those who were active in Wall street during this eventful period of inflation and speculation must note, more than others, the vast change that has come over sentiment and opinion in Wall street and everywhere else.

"Both Wall street and the outside public have lost the faith they once had in many of the stock market leaders, the men who were once followed blindly in their schemes of inflation and regarded as omnipotent in their execution. The power and prestige of these leaders, for the present at least, have entirely passed away, and none are so poor as to do them reverence. The devotees of the street no longer worship the old idols."

History Repeats

BUT THIS STATEMENT was not written in 1931. It was penned by Henry Clews, dean of the Wall Street Man, in his book called "Fifty Years in Wall Street." It was published in 1908 and was written over the ashes of the panic of 1907. The quotation is unchanged except for the omission of dates.

Mr. Clews went on to say that there is nothing to provoke pessimism in the magnificent strides we are making in the march of progress. No doubt his prediction at that time was considered to be just as vacuous and blindly optimistic as similar remarks would be today.

This 23 year-old statement has not been unearthed with the intention of showing that business will improve tomorrow. It has been presented to show that all depressions end sooner or later—a fact which seems to have been forgotten.

Couple Held Up, $1,900 Loot Taken

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—Meyer Racusin, 45, reported to police that he and his wife were robbed of $900 in cash and a diamond ring valued at $1,000, by two masked bandits early yesterday as they stepped from their automobile in the rear of their home.

They had just returned from a visit to friends when the two holdup men trained pistols on them. Taking the money from Racusin's pocket and snatching a ring from Mrs. Racusin's hand, the robbers fled in an automobile.

PENN MUTUAL ADVANCES OFFICERS

Two Pitt Graduates Named Assistant Managers by Life Insurance Company

In the readjustment of the organization of the local agency of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company to absorb the continued development of the agency and in anticipation of an enlarged activity in 1932, Holgar J. Johnson, general agent, announces the advancement of G. Harold Moore and Howard V. Krick to the positions of assistant agency managers, with full responsibility for the development of agency units in 1932.

Both Krick and Moore are graduates of the University of Pittsburgh and have been connected with the local agency for several years. These men are leaders in the company and have done an outstanding job in the development of the local agency, which has shown a very unusual growth in the past four years, having established four branch offices and built an agency force of 110 men serving the Western Pennsylvania district.

BLAST FURNACE ACTIVITY OFF

The number of active blast furnaces having been reduced to 67 in November, production is being held closely to demand and improved blast furnace practice has now made it possible to control the volume of furnace output without the terrific sacrifice due to the increased cost that formerly attended slack tonnage production. Shipments of pig iron have declined during December to a low point, nevertheless it is comforting to note that reports from all sections indicate that foundry stocks are low and that sustained buying in fair volume should develop during the early months of 1932.

Ferro alloy contracts are being placed for 1932 in a way that would indicate a high degree of confidence on the part of the buyers that the prices are acceptable and that a reasonable volume of business may be expected during the coming year.

RETAIL TRADE ACTIVITY HIGH

Christmas items moved quite actively this week, the big stores transacting quite a large volume of business, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review. Values are materially lower than a year ago and receipts will be lower.

Unusually mild temperatures retard the buying of seasonable wearing apparel, and jobbers in general report business very quiet.

The bituminous coal market continues very dull, with demand from industrial sources at a lower rate, and consumers' demand being affected by the mild weather. Prices show practically no change, being still very unsatisfactory.

While some jobbers report a slight improvement in collections, the average generally continues to be slow.

By JAMES J. LONG

Rift in Carey's Clouds. Crosetti Shift Opposed.
Wright Mending Fast. Leifield's Sale Record.
Problem of Greenleaf. Value of Heavy Backs.

FORMER BUC MAIN HOPE OF DODGERS.

MAX CAREY admits that if there is one item that makes him feel more hopeful than any other that he will be able to come through with a creditable showing in Brooklyn next year in his first season as a major league manager, it is the news he has received of a steady improvement in the condition of Glenn Wright. The troublesome ankles of the former Pirate shortstop are reported much stronger, and instead of being forced to give up baseball, as it was feared for a time he would have to do, Wright has hopes of being as good next spring as ever.

Glenn Wright

Carey for a while faced a darker outlook than any other big league pilot for 1932. With Wright hobbling around in a pair of specially constructed shoes designed to strengthen his weak ankles, First Baseman Del Bissonette in a hospital to undergo an operation on his ailing throwing arm, and Third Baseman Wally Gilbert headed for Hot Springs to boil the kinks out of his legs, the future of three-fourths of Max's infield was in doubt.

BUT NOW THAT encouraging reports are coming in from all three sources things are looking up in the Dodger family, and Carey is confident it will be possible to start the season with his inner defense intact. The promised return of Wright, he admits, has cheered him more than anything else. Without Glenn the Dodgers would be seriously, if not fatally weakened on both attack and defense, but with him they will look like formidable contenders from the start of the pennant race. He spells the difference between a flag candidate and a club that could not hope to finish higher than third or fourth.

"Glenn's a great ball player when he's in shape," Carey says. "I was with him in Pittsburgh and also in Brooklyn, and I don't know anybody in the whole National League I'd rather have out there on my ball club. Wright has everything—batting power, fielding skill, winning spirit and brains. It would have been a tough break if we were forced to stagger along without him, but I think the chances are against such a calamity now. It means everything to us."

HOW LONG THE world pocket billiard champion, Ralph Greenleaf, will be able to stay on the throne he has just regained after a year's break in his reign depends entirely on himself, in the opinion of billiard men throughout the country who know his ability.

It's all a question of condition, they think. There is no doubt of his exceptional class, and on the score of ability alone some of them do not hesitate to pronounce him the greatest pocket player of all time.

BUT GREENLEAF HAS not always been overly careful in the matter of observing the rules of fitness. There have been times when he failed to take the best of care of himself, and his laxity in that respect, not the development of better players, was the cause of his downfall. Now that he is back at the top of the ladder again, as the result of a clean sweep of his 11 games in the annual title tournament, his future manner of living is the only thing that leaves open to question the length of time he will remain there. In shape, he has the ability to rule the field indefinitely, but if he slips again he will be inviting another dethronement by one of the up-and-coming youngsters. His case has pointed out again that condition is the prime requisite of a champion in any sport.

Frank Crosetti

IT HAS BEEN understood that Joe McCarthy planned to convert Frank Crosetti, coast shortstop, into a third baseman for the Yankees next year, but George Harper, former major league outfielder with Oakland last season, predicts that Joe will change his mind. He expects to see Crosetti kept at shortstop and Lyn Larry moved to the hot corner.

"The Yankees have obtained a wonderful young shortstop in Crosetti," Harper says. "I saw him play many games for San Francisco last season and can see a brilliant future for him in the American League. He is a natural shortstop, fast as lightning in covering ground, has a powerful arm and can hit all kinds of pitching. As soon as McCarthy sees him in action he will put Lynn Larry on third base."

HOW FAR THE fistic experts were from considering Tommy Loughran done before King Levinsky pulled that big upset, and how far they were from conceding Levinsky a chance with him, may be judged from the result of a heavyweight poll conducted by Wilbur Wood.

Seventy of the foremost boxing critics of the country voted to rank the leading heavyweights. Loughran was ranked third while Levinsky didn't come within a mile of being voted a place among the first 10.

THE BEST THE Kingfish got was a naming on the honorable mention list, and even there he was sixth, ranked behind Charley Retzlaff, Larry Gains, Max Baer, Steve Hamas and Walter Cobb. As was announced at the time, first place, of course, went to Max Schmeling as champion, and Jack Sharkey drew second honors in the consensus. Loughran followed Sharkey, and the remainder of the positions among the first 10 were awarded to Ernie Schaaf, Mickey Walker, Young Stribling, Primo Carnera, Tuffy Griffiths, Stanley Poreda and Paulino Uzcudun, in the order named.

LEFTY LEIFIELD, former Pirate pitcher, made one record as manager of the St. Paul pennant winners in the American Association this year that has rarely been approached in the minors. He developed such a strong team that the owners were able to sell almost the entire lineup to big league clubs for next season.

Of the seven regular players on Leifield's club, no fewer than five have been purchased by major league operators. First Baseman Oscar Roetger has been bought by the A's, Second Baseman Jack Saltzgaver by the Yankees, Shortstop Joe Morrissey by the Reds, Outfielder Harold Anderson by the White Sox and Outfielder George Davis by the Phillies. Lefty will face the task of building almost a whole new club next year, but he surely made money for his employers.

WHILE POST-SEASON football discussions continue, George Trevor recalls, in touching on the subject of weight in the backfield, that Pop Warner has always maintained at least two of the four backs should be giant battering rams.

Pop didn't have many big men available to carry out that theory at Carlisle, but at Pitt and Stanford he was able to put his ideas into practice and used such pile-drivers as McLaren, Hewitt, Hoffman, Rothert, Nevers and Fleischaker to pound enemy lines groggy.

Pop Warner

"I was lucky in getting Warner as my coach," Fleischaker himself puts in, "as under any other football teacher I'd have been a tackle, with my 6 feet 3 inches and 230 pounds. They never let me play any position except tackle in high school, so I naturally reported for that position at Stanford. When Pop got an eyeful of me he said, 'Hey, you, get behind the line and let's see you carry the ball.' I never went back to tackle. Warner is a great believer in heavyweight backs. He feels that they can wear down a defense by continuous pounding. After the enemy secondaries have tackled a fast-moving 220-pounder three or four times they begin to lost their zest. The wear and tear are terrific. Even when they stopped me I felt that I was doing damage that would tell later on. A few head-on collisions like that and you could feel the tacklers weakening."

PITT BATTLES COLORADO

TED TOO FAST FOR LOCAL RING RIVAL

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

There is a new welterweight boxing king in Western Pennsylvania today—Teddy Yarosz, of Monaca. Santa Claus granted him his wish in the 10-round main bout at Motor Square Garden before a capacity crowd at the special Christmas matinee show yesterday when he packed a decisive victory over Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, into Teddy's short fighting socks.

The fight went according to the dope. It was figured in advance that Belmont would have to score heavily with his left hook, possibly for a knockout blow, to win, or otherwise he would be outscored by the busy boxing bee from the Beaver Valley.

WINS HANDILY

The undefeated Yarosz — this was his forty-eighth successive victory as a professional—won so handily that there was not a single dissenting voice when the decision in his favor was announced, although the crowd was strikingly partisan. The judges and the referee were unanimous in selecting him, and the announcement of the verdict was a mere formality.

No serious damage was done on either side. Belmont seldom scored with his heavy guns except to the body, and Yarosz was able to shake off the effect of these punches. Just before the bell in the third round a left hook broke through Ted's high right guard and hurt him along the ropes, but he came back fighting to force the going as the round ended. There were no knockdowns for counts, but Yarosz visited the canvas twice and Belmont once. Ted first went down momentarily in the second round and he tripped in the tenth, while Belmont slipped down after landing a blow in the ninth.

SECOND WIN OVER JIMMY

Throughout from the opening bell Yarosz set the pace. He kept moving about away from Jimmy's dangerous left hook and stabbing off his foe with his left and crossing rights. And so it continued to the end. After the halfway mark, it developed into a boxing lesson for Belmont, who tried desperately but found Teddy simply too shifty and too fast a thinkes for him. It was Yarosz' second victory over Jimmy. He scored the first at Franklin in October of last year.

It was a pleasing bout to watch and the pair may meet again, but the chances are that Yarosz always will beat Jimmy if their bout goes the limit. Belmont will have to score more effectively than he did yesterday to keep in the running. Yarosz had him more or less bewildered with his speed and straight punching and Jimmy was missing badly and looking none too good in spots.

WINS EIGHT ROUNDS

Each finished the bout with a damaged right eye. Belmont had a small lump above his optic, while Yarosz suffered a bruise under his eye.

With the exception of the second and ninth rounds, which were even, Yarosz carried all of the sessions. Both weighed in at 148½ pounds. Al Grayber refereed.

Tiger Joe West, of Brookline, 163, won by a technical knockout over Billy Flanagan, of Braddock, 158, after 15 seconds of the sixth round of the scheduled eight-round semi-final, when he battered the blonde to the floor under a barrage of blows. Billy rolled about, his head buried in the canvas, and finally pulled himself up at the count of nine but was groggy and suffering from a newly-inflicted bad cut over his left eye, and Referee Red Robinson called a halt. West had won every round, but it was a good fight up to its sudden finish.

BEATTY, WARNER WIN

Allen Beatty, of the Hill, 148, gave the tough and willing, but slow-punching, Anson Green, of Homestead, 149½, a classy lesson in the art of fisticuffs in their six-round bout. They are Negroes. Jack Henderson was the referee.

Johnny Warner, of Clairton 125½, demonstrated the proper manner of beating a southpaw when he scored a technical knockout victory over Al Iovino, of Swissvale, 125½, in 1 minute 55 seconds of the first round in the opener. Warner concentrated on throwing straight rights to the jaw and floored his man for

Belmont Gets Bigger Purse Than Klaus

Jimmy Belmont, in losing to Ted Yarosz in the 10-round main bout at Motor Square Garden yesterday afternoon, received a little more than $1,700, which his manager, Frank Klaus, declared was a larger sum than he ever drew down during his career as middleweight champion of the world. Yarosz received a like amount.

The gate totaled approximately $7,200 and would have been larger but for the ban on standing room. Many prospective customers were turned away.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF LAST THURSDAY: MADE A HOLE IN ONE ON A BET—Royal G. Warren, of 1416 Stanford street, Houston, Tex., on June 16, 1931, made a wager with W. M. Gaston ($5 to $50) that he could make a hole in one within one hour's time, shooting as many balls as he could within that time. The hole was to be about 135 yards. Warren and four of his associates went to the Brae-Burn Country Club in Houston and chose the second hole for the test. Warren shot with various clubs and finally sank the one-hundredth ball in exactly 53 minutes, using a midiron. The winning of the wager was witnessed and verified by the loser and three other players. CAPT. JOHNSEN SAILED ALONE ACROSS THE ATLANTIC—On August 21, 1876, Capt. Alfred Johnsen landed at Liverpool, England, completing a 66-day voyage from Gloucester, Mass., alone. His small boat Centennial was one of his own make, of three-quarter-ton measurement. The vessel was decked over, except standing room and hatchway, was fitted with two water-tight compartments and had a single mast which could be hoisted or lowered at will. Her full canvas was a mainsail, two jibs and a square sail. Although lone mariners still are undertaking lengthy cruises, some even going around the world, there are few, if any, who ever succeeded in a craft as small as Capt. Johnsen's. THE CITY OF MUD-EATERS—Yezd, in Central Persia, is situated in the midst of a vast salt desert extending thousands of miles in all directions. The nearest inhabited place is Ispahan, which is more than 200 miles away. The solitude in which Yezd is situated make it one of the strangest human settlements on earth. The city in its entirety is built of mud, roughly moulded and dried in the sun. Its 50 mosques, 65 public baths, eight schools, all the houses, furniture, grain receptacles, etc., are made of mud. So are the goods displayed on mud shelves, and even its bakers' ovens down to the very doors. Mud is the chief article of diet of its inhabitants, numbering about 45,000, and is cooked and enjoyed in a variety of ways.

Just 57 seconds after the seventh had started, Bass crossed a right which ended the battle. At good showing.

The track closed following the program Wednesday. It was the intention of the Border Association to reopen January 1, after a program of refinancing has been completed.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

LAST NIGHT'S RESULT

N. Y. Rangers	6—N. Y. Americans	0

By CARL W. SHATTO

Although they are to enjoy three additional days of idleness from International League hockey competition, Coach Charley Reid today reassembled his Yellow Jackets and put them through a stiff workout in preparation for their next game—against the Olympics in Detroit next Tuesday night. The members of the squad who spent Christmas here went through a drill on Duquesne Garden ice this morning, and the skaters who visited Canada to spend the holiday with relatives were due back in Pittsburgh in time to participate in a practice session tonight.

Coach Reid expressed himself as satisfied with the manner in which the injuries of Gordy Fraser, Art Berlett and Earl Miller are responding to treatment. Gordy has had his crippled knee in a brace all week, and Berlett and Miller have been under a doctor's care with their back and hip hurts, respectively. Reid expects to have his team back at full strength for the Detroit engagement, and he hopes that there are no further additions to the hospital list when the Cleveland Indians come here Thursday, and the London Tecumsehs appear on Garden ice on Saturday.

Although the Jackets are losing ground in the title race each day that they are idle, the loss is (or promises to be) only temporary. The local skaters are falling behind in the number of games played, and they will have many opportunities to pick up points to match those annexed by other teams while the Reidmen enjoy their recess.

DETROIT IS WINNER

DETROIT, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—Playing the most aggressive hockey it has displayed at home, Detroit defeated Cleveland, 2 to 1, in an International League hockey game here last night.

Both of Detroit's goals were solo efforts by Frank Steele, while the visitors' point was made on a pass from McGuire to Spring.

BEARS, GEORGIA TECH CLASH

ATLANTA, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—California's Golden Bears carry the Pacific Coast football banner into the battle here today with Georgia Tech.

California enters the intersectional charity game highly favored to defeat one of the weakest Tech teams in years, to repay the Yellow Jackets for the 8-to-7 setback of three years ago.

Both coaches canceled plans for morning practices and held two hour drills yesterday afternoon.

Most of the Tech drill was concerned with its aerial preparations. Bobby Dodd, assistant coach, was giving particular attention to MacArthur and Flowers, who will do the passing for Tech.

The odds on California continued to remain hight as game time neared. But few look for a Southern victory.

Coach Ingram would not commit himself.

"If we win, it probably will be by a low score," he said.

The probable lineup:

California		Georgia Tech

Mallory	L. T.	Thorpe
Carlson	L. G.	Lake
Melanich	C.	Nebiker
Sam Gill	R. G.	Lackey

CARLSON DENIES PROSELYSIS IN FLOOR SQUAD

By H. C. Carlson
PITT BASKETBALL COACH
Written Exclusively for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

DENVER, Dec. 26.—Tonight our University of Pittsburgh Golden Cats engage the University of Colorado tossers, champions of the eastern division of the Rocky Mountain Conference.

Dr. H. C. Carlson

After that — on to California!

Following a two-day rest the Pitt boys are on edge for battle and it would not surprise me if we won tonight. We have only captured two games thus far in our Western tour.

Since this basketball trip is simultaneous with the opening of the over-emphasis season, I have given thought to both. So-called proselysis is foreign to Pitt. Basketeers, and practically every player lives within five miles of the city limits and commutes. Their average age is under 20, and everyone is in basketball heart and soul, but they must keep up in their school work and the game is an added incentive to study.

MAKE SACRIFICES

They are learning the value of application, perseverance and sacrifice in the scheme of accomplishment. They play according to the rules of the game or are penalized. Their traveling is at the invitation of other institutions, whose expenses are paid by anticipating fans and Pitt is the medium of further education in addition to the regular curricula, if the art of entering a thing wholeheartedly, giving 100 per cent, means anything.

If the inculcation of loyalty and willingness to obey laws in the face of adversity is not desirable, then we should follow the nossier minority, hurling destructive criticism at athletics. The betterment of the country is coming from the up-and-coming clean-cut healthy boys, and not from the smoking, gin-drinking pseudo upper crust of society.

ENJOY MERRY CHRISTMAS

In Kansas City Wednesday I saw a tiny tot try to smoke a cigaret grabbed from the family chauffeur and I don't suppose athletics is overemphasized in that family.

Christmas eve troupes of carol singers, a band and the hotel orchestra furnished Christmas music, and later the boys hung up their socks. Santa came through in great shape and a regular happy Christmas morning party was held, followed by an afternoon tour of the snowy Rockies.

DUDLEY LEADS GOLF SCORERS

CHICAGO, Dec. 26.—(AP.)—Ed Dudley, of Wilmington, Del., was the scoring champion of American professional golf in 1931.

Official statistics compiled by the Professional Golfers' Association of America have disclosed that the big fellow from Wilmington, who captured the Los Angeles, and the Western open crowns, averaged but 71.39 strokes for the 30 matches he played against all star fields.

Right behind Dudley came Johnny Farrell, the debonair New York star, who averaged 71.8 shots for each 18-hole round against first class competition. Although Farrell failed to capture an important title, he turned in his best golfing performances since he defeated Bobby Jones in that famous 36-hole play off for the national open championship at Olympia Fields in 1928.

Farrell was the hardest working professional of the year, the P. G. A. statistics revealed, contesting in 36 rounds of championship tournament play. A selected 30 rounds, the number played by Dudley, would have given him first place.

The two leading money winners of the year, Gene Sarazen and George Von Elm, were above the 73 mark. Sarazen's average was 73.03 while Von Elm, who fought Burke in the gr at golfing marathon at Inverness for the National open crown, averaged 73.12.

Other leaders and their averages:

Harry Cooper, Chicago, 72.33; Al Espinosa, Chicago, 72.11; Mortie Dutra, Los Angeles, 72.33; Horton Smith, New York, 73.5; MacDonald Smith, New York, 73.64; Tommy Armour, Detroit, 74.14; Tom Creavy, New York, 74.21; Leo Diegel, Agua Caliente, Mexico, 74.6, and Wiley Cox, New York, 75.

HAFEY N. L. BATTING CHAMPION

YOUNGER WANER TOPS LEAGUE IN BASEHITS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Chick Hafey of the world champion Cardinals won the batting honors of the National League this year but Chick left a very narrow margin of greatness over Bill Terry of the Giants and Lloyd Waner, Pirate outfield star of the new season. The race for the batting championship was so close that the fourth decimal had to be employed to settle the issue. The official league batting records are given out for publication today.

Chick Hafey

Hafey hit for .3489. Terry was second with .3486 and Bottomley third with .3482. The league statisticians point out that only once before was it necessary to carry out the percentage to the fourth figure to determine the winner. In 1892 Cupid Childs of Cleveland Nationals led the league with .335. Dan Brouthers of the old-time Dodgers being second with .3350.

CHICK USES GLASSES

The batting champ for the season is a right-hand batter and wears glasses on and off the field. Chick suffered with sinus trouble and eventually was compelled to use spectacles in his baseball work. Terry and Bottomley are left-hand hitters.

Lloyd Waner is the only member of the Pirate band to come in for any distinction in the batting figures. The smallest star of the leagues on top of a season of sickness in 1930 was clever enough to lead the circuit in hits. Brother Lloyd clicked 214 times and he registered the most one-baggers, 172.

The wee center-fielder established a new record for times at bat with 661. The former mark, 672, was made by Rabbit Maranville, then a Pirate, in 1922.

Other interesting developments in the hitting of the league as revealed by Al Munro Elias follow:

FIE PLAYED ALL GAMES

Official records of the league show that 247 players took part in championship games. Of this number, 83 engaged in 75 games or more, 121 took part in from 10 to 74 games, and 43 appeared in fewer than 10 games.

Terry, New York, and Charles H. Klein, Philadelphia, tied for scoring most runs, 121. Klein collected most total bases on hits, 347, and led in making home runs, with 21. Terry made most three-base hits, 20.

Earl J. Adams, St. Louis made most two-base hits, 46. Frederick F. Maguire, Boston, had the greatest number of sacrifice hits, 31. Frank F. Frisch, St. Louis, was the leader in stolen bases with 28. Forty-three players hit for .300 or better, which was 28 fewer than in 1930.

Five players took part in all their clubs games. Walter H. Berger, Boston, 156 games; Elwood G. English, Chicago, 156 games; Harold J. Traynor, Pittsburgh, 155 games; Anthony F. Cuccinello, Cincinnati, 154 games, and William H. Terry, New York, 153 games.

STOBBS MAY GO TO WASH-JEFF

WASHINGTON, Pa., Dec. 26—(AP)—Members of the Washington & Jefferson athletic board declined to comment today on the statement of William T. Stobbs, head coach of Wittenberg College, that he had been approached concerning the coaching position at W. & J. Bill Amos, present head coach, could not be reached for a statement.

Amos has been subjected to criticism by undergraduates and alumni since the 1931 team, one of the most promising in the East at the opening of the season, failed to win several games. Amos could not be reached today.

Friends of Amos place the blame on the situation at the school. They state that throughout the past season Amos was handicapped by having waring factions on the team.

Amos is a W. & J. graduate and former all-America selection. The 1931 team was Amos' second at the school.

Stobbs has been at Wittenberg for three years. His contract expires next September. At W. & J. he also would be coaching his alma mater, he having played on one of Bob Folwell's strong President elevens 15 years ago.

APPROACHED, STOBBS SAYS

SPRINGFIELD, O., Dec. 26—(AP)—William T. (Bill) Stobbs, head coach of Wittenberg College, said today he had been approached by Washington and Jefferson College athletic authorities about becoming head coach at that institution, but no definite action had been taken.

He said the matter would come before the athletic board of Washington and Jefferson in January and no decision would be reached until then. His contract with Wittenberg expires in September, 1932.

William T. Theurer, graduate manager of athletics and a member of the athletic council at Wash-Jeff, told the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph that the report of Stobbs replacing Bill Amos as head coach was news to him and that no official overtures had been made the present Wittenberg mentor.

SHOOT IS HELD

AMERICAN-BORN BOOTERS SCORE 7-0 VICTORY

By TOM BIRKS

Buff Donnelli, the greatest soccer star ever developed in Western Pennsylvania, came back yesterday for 90 minutes, just to show a team of foreign-born players how goals should be scored. Buff, in giving the greatest display of scoring ever witnessed here, tallied five goals in rapid succession to give the homebreds a 7-to-0 victory over a team of foreign-born players at South Park. A crowd of 5,000 fans watched the debacle.

Buff actually netted the ball seven times, but two goals were not permitted for offside. The teams were selected by a committee of the West Penn Football Association.

Johnny Jaap, another local great, made his first appearance since returning from the American Professional League, but with little help from the other players of the foreign-born front line he never had a chance.

The homebreds were brilliant, and the front line gave a great exhibition. Chappell's and Molly's great runs and centers made it possible for Buff to score.

The score at half time was 3 to 0. The foreign-born team's committee made three changes. Reismann, Dunlop and McNair went into the lineup, but Grandy and McGreevan stopped them dead. McCoskey and Bookie scored the other two points for the victors.

At Leslie Park yesterday, the Pittsburgh Rovers and the Maryland All-Stars played a 3-3 tie game. McGuire scored twice for the Pittsburghers, while Widdows scored two for the Cumberland club. The Rovers meet the All-Stars on New Year's Day at Cumberland. The lineups:

Nevis Disturbed by News of Marital Difficulties Of Her Friends

CHAPTER XIII

"What on earth," said Nevis—"I thought they were so happy, although he's a lot older. That explains what Della and Frances meant the night they were at the apartment—our housewarming, remember? Speaking of housewarmings—what will become of the new Waterford house?"

"Sam says Fluff wants it and Waterford will probably include it in his settlement on her. He hasn't a leg to stand on. Apartment on Riverside drive of all places and a Rolls and sables and Gee knows what.

It appears that everyone in town knew about it but Fluff. Sam said that she said—not that I care so much about his having been unfaithful before and it seems as if it was just one of those things you have to expect of a man. But he could at least have been decently discreet about it. I won't be made a laughing stock. I'll never forgive him. I never want to see him again."

"Well, she has to see him, of course, and Sam said they sat and glared at each other and that the names they called each other were something to write home about. Sam was awfully upset. He wouldn't have told even me if he hasn't been a little off his nut. He's crazy about Fluff. You know he thinks she's the last word. And he's always liked Les. Bill paused and laughed from sheer astonishment. 'Les—who the Hades would have thought it of him?'

There was a spice of mockery in his tone astonishment and a very broad hint of admiration. Nevis her ears sharpened heard it. She thought . . . he despises Les for being such a fool.

Bill added, sitting astride a chair, his chin on the back.

"And what's more the Carlyles are separating. It seems it has been coming for a long time."

"Why?" asked Nevis and felt a distinct shock of sorrow. She liked Frances and Dirk Carlyle. They were nice people, good sports. And she always told Della that they must care a lot about each other to have grown so much alike in 10 years of marriage."

CAN'T TAKE SIDES

"I don't know," said Bill, "but it's a darned shame, isn't it? Gee, we'll miss them. I mean, I suppose Frances will go on living down here and Dirk will stay in town and we'll see them both, but it won't be the same. Sam said that he'd heard that Frances was keen on that man we met at Carter's—remember—the newspaper fellow? He's a lot younger than she is and one of the best two-fisted serious drinkers I ever saw in my life, but that can't be a recommendation for romance."

He added:

"Well, we can't take sides."

"No," said Nevis. She powdered her nose. She added: "Of course we can't. But it's hard all the same. Theoretically you can be friends with both practically you can't."

"Gosh," said Bill again. "I'm sorry about it all."

He dropped a kiss on the top of her head. He said: "It's a long while before it gets dark. I hoped to get home earlier. Still I think I can make dinner and nine holes too if you hold things back. So long, Infant."

He clattered down the stairs. Nevis rose from her dressing table and pulling her wisp of a silken negligee about her, sat down in the low chair by the window and stared out on treetops and lawn. She thought: "... what a mess."

She remembered the newspaper fellow. It couldn't be serious. Frances must be out of her mind. But she recalled now that Frances had been unlike herself during the last few months; terribly restless, smoking too much, drinking too much. She thought, I must talk to Della.

VISITS DELLA

Della due in town next week to wait at the hospital for her baby. Della and Mort seemed the surest things left in life. Nevis flung on a straight one-piece linen dress, called over the stairs to Hari that dinner must be delayed, flew out to the garage and got out the old car and drove to Della's. She knew she would find her in the trained nurse had already been installed and she and Della were in a perfect welter of baby trousseaus all day long.

Della greeted her gaily.

"Come in. Mort's had to stay in town. I'm going to have dinner on a tray with Miss Morrison. Join us, will you?"

No. Bill's home. He's playing golf now and we're having a late dinner. Della, have you heard about Fluff and Les?"

Della and she were alone in the living room. Della said, after a moment, "I've known it for some time. So it's broken, then." Front page stuff tomorrow, I suppose. Les is a fool. Fluff—well, I don't know about Fluff. It has happened before, you know, and she put a good face on it and kept a stiff upper lip and went along as if nothing had happened. She married him, you see, when she was just short of eighteen. She was warned, but she married him all the same and her pride wouldn't permit her to say she'd had enough."

Nevis admitted, helplessly: "I don't understand people. Bill told me. He told me that Sam said Frances and Dirk were separating."

"I know. I've known that too, for ages. It isn't official, she'll go to Europe this fall and Dirk will live at his club in town. They'll do it gradually and without a lot of talk. Her fault, I told her so. Dirk's all right, if a little slow on the uptake. She, she just doesn't know what she wants."

Nevis said and felt herself flushing:

"Sam said—another man?"

"Stew Williamson? Oh, I don't think that means anything. I mean by that Frances had always had a man or two hanging around. It flatters her. She has to have a lot of attention. Dirk was always pretty busy. I suppose she got so used to it after a while that the sight of Dirk on a rare evening at home alone got on her nerves. I've argued with her all summer. No use."

She advised, smiling into Nevis troubled dark eyes:

"Don't you worry. Marriage is an obstacle race. You and Bill are all right."

Were they? Nevis wondered.

She went home to wait for Bill. He was late, of course. Hari came out of the kitchen with a long face and the announcement that dinner was ruined. She said absently: "It doesn't matter really," and Hari went back to the kitchen to engage his running-mate in conversation and speculations.

Nevis went out on the lawn, sat down in a wicker chair beneath the great oak tree that was the pride of the little place. She looked across the close cropped green grass to the winding tree-shadowed reaches of Old Lynn Lane. She thought: ... it's lovely here ... and peaceful.

But it wasn't. Fluff and Waterford and Frances and Dirk and, now she had to face it herself and Bill.

She hadn't even been decent to Bill lately. That was Olive. Olive and her possessive manner. Bill was an idiot the way he permitted himself to be taken in by that arid girl with her slow eyes and her caressing fingertips.

If Bill hadn't permitted himself to be drawn into an affair with Olive, thought Nevis, convinced, she herself wouldn't have gone as far as she had with Harry Carter. She didn't love Harry. She liked him, and he had become necessary to her, salve to her wounds, ointment to her hurt vanity.

But, she thought suddenly, that's like Frances, in a way ... amusing herself with other men because Dirk has ceased to amuse her, until she can't get along without them.

She thought frightened, you drift into these things and the first thing you know, you're sunk.

She knew definitely, sitting there, thinking things out for the first time that she couldn't be unfaithful to Bill. She loved him. And even if she didn't love him as much as she now admitted to herself, she was too fastidious. She couldn't even be mentally unfaithful. Planning her affair with Carter out of sheer pique, she realized that she had never crossed a borderline in her thoughts; had made of Carter's devotion a mere romantic stop-gap, just a way of squaring things and no harm done. She had perhaps visioned him as a hopeless but determined suitor over a period of years. Meetings in town, walks in the country, tea by the fire, flowers, books, candy ... letters. No more.

But things didn't stand still and mark time. They went ahead or they stopped. She sat there, remembering that this very afternoon, Harry Carter had been in her house, had taken her in his arms, had kissed her in a far from platonic manner and had suggested to her in so many words, that she permit him to become her lover. In fact. And she had listened. She had said: "No, no, Harry, please don't talk about it." But she had listened. She had thought ... why not? Had thought why not, because she had not permitted her imagination to paint too definite a picture, had but merely visualized Harry as her lover vaguely and without details.

Fool! she said to herself.

Whose fault was it? Her own? Bill's ... or the sort of idle life they led, rushed to death, busy every moment, and yet intolerably idle. Bonds for Bill and lunches and dinners and golf and parties and yachting trips and old women to be flattered, so that their husbands would listen when he talked business, and young women to be made love to because it was the mode of the moment. And the chase after money and the pursuit of excitement and the restless hunt after stimulation. Merry-go-round. That's what it was. Now and then you caught a brass ring. And that's all it was, brass.

She turned the little platinum band on her finger as she thought. She thought further ... it wouldn't have happened, home ... oh, I know people get divorces ... and I know they're pretty gay back there ... or try to be ... but the gay ones are usually the ones that end down here or try to bring New York up there ... and when marriages go on the rocks, it just isn't out of boredom and looking for some substitute for happiness; it goes deeper than that.

"Don't you worry. You and Bill are all right," Della said.

She was suddenly sickeningly ashamed of herself; ashamed for Bill; for them all, for Fluff and Les, for Dirk and Frances. She put her dark head in her slim, strong hands and cried, careless of who might see her.

Bill appeared suddenly. She had not heard him drive in. He had come across the lawn quietly leaving the car in front of the house. He said: "Nevis ..." in deep consternation.

She reached up blindly and pulled him down beside her. He knelt there, and shook her gently. His thick blond hair was damp with sweat and curled tightly about his bronzed forehead. His blue eyes were concerned. He asked: "Darling, what's the matter? ... Nevis ... what's happened? Bad news from home?"

She answered dimly: "It's nothing. I'm tired, I guess. Bill, couldn't we go away together somewhere? It's September, almost. Couldn't we get away for a little while, alone? I'm so fed up with everything."

His heart leaped. She did care, after all. Lately, she'd been so different. He said gently: "I'll ask Burton. I'm sure we can. Come on into the house, Infant ... if anyone goes down the lane they'll spread the rumor that I beat you."

Nevis said, smiling a little: "Sometimes I wish you would."

He pulled her out of the chair and they went toward the house, his arm around her shoulders. Hari, peering from the windows of the living room chuckled and scuttered into the kitchen to tell his team-mate that everything was all right again. Dinner appeared on the table, a cold dinner, and a good one. Nevis went into the bathroom with Bill and washed her face in cold water. He said, drying his hands: "I shot a rotten game. Losing my pep, I guess. Nevis, what's wrong?"

She answered, groping for words:

"The Waterfords, Frances and Dirk. Everything. Bill, I'm frightened!"

"Dinner," announced Hari, thinly, from the distance.

They went downstairs. "Gee, I'm starved," said Bill. Nevis, making a pretense of eating, watched him, across the table. The room was long and cool and the shadows cast by the flickering candles were deep and green-blue as still water, there were tree branches tapping on the windows, and the roses on the table were darkly reflected in the black and green glass service which Hari had spread upon the lace cloth.

"You aren't eating, honey."

"I'm not hungry. Bill, could we go to Cape Cod?"

"We'll see. Nevis, what's gotten into you?" he asked, distressed.

"I don't know. You'll ask Mr. Burton, won't you?" she begged him.

He promised:

"Sure, I'll ask him. What say we take a little ride tonight, out a ways? Olive—I saw her at the club—wanted us to come in for contract. I said we would, but you 'phone you have a headache or something."

She thought: he is a dear after all. His eyes were as blue as a child's and very anxious. She rose.

"Finish your coffee. I'll 'phone," she said.

Olive was none too pleased. "I had two tables made up," she wailed. But Nevis said shortly, "I'm sorry, we can't; that's all. I've a wretched headache."

It was true enough. Olive suggested casually:

"Send Bill over then."

"No," said Nevis, "sorry, he's staying with me."

Synopsis

Nevis and Bill Lancaster, young newlyweds, leave the little Pennsylvania town where they were raised and go to New York. They lease a small apartment and Bill becomes a bond salesman. As he succeeds, they take a house and entertain beyond their means to make an impression. Nevis sees little of Bill. She disapproves of their extravagance, but Bill assures her it is necessary to promote business. Then Bill meets the flirtatious Olive Blanchard, who makes no secret of her designs on him. When Nevis suggests a vacation, Bill tells her he has been invited on a big fishing trip by Mr. Bartlett, a prospective client. Nevis, furious, asks him if it was business which accounted for his attentions to Mrs. Bartlett at a party. Bill believes Nevis should help him by accepting the attentions of men they meet in a semi-social way. Nevis visits Della Hunt, a friend, and meets Harry Carter, the well known architect. A car drives up to Olive's home, across the street, and Nevis is stunned to hear Bill's and Olive's voices. Later, at a dance Nevis sees Bill kiss Olive.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

We wouldn't be a bit surprised if most of the boys and girls in the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club slept late this morning. Why shouldn't they? Yesterday's excitement was enough to tire grown ups.

After a long round of Christmas trees, new toys, and more sweets than were good for us, we fought off the sandman was past bed time. When the little ones finally toddled off to bed, they sailed into slumberland hugging new dollies, teddy bears and woolly cats and dogs.

Now Christmas is over. The gifts that were so bright and new yesterday will have our tenderest care—for a little while. Then they will be thrown aside and forgotten.

LOOKING FORWARD

Do you remember, not so long ago, the Warner Theaters and the Sun-Telegraph gave a toy matinee at all Warner theaters? Every child who brought a toy—even a broken toy—was admitted without charge. The toys given by the children were turned over to the Toy Mission where they were mended, and made to look as nearly new as possible.

On Christmas Eve these mended toys were taken to hospitals, orphan asylums and into the homes of children who otherwise would have not known there was a Christmas. It was your gift to the poor, and if you could have seen how happy it made these poor children, you would have danced with joy.

THIS YEAR'S TOYS

Next year the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club will have another toy matinee. Wouldn't it be nice if you could keep some of this years toys to give to the Toy Mission when next Christmas rolls around?

By "keeping" your toys we do not mean packing them away right now. Play with them. Have as much fun as you can with them, but try not to break them. Then next year you will be able to make someone very happy.

Next week we will celebrate New Years Day, the day for making good resolutions. Suppose members of the Sun-Telegraph Junior Komic Club make this their resolution. To take care of their toys and give them to the poor when they are tired of them.

Write a letter to the Supreme Grand Jester, in care of the Sun-Telegraph, and tell him how you feel about it?

BIRTHDAY GREETINGS

The Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club extends greetings to the following members who will celebrate their birthdays tomorrow.

Rowland: Anthenette Reiel.

South Hills: Peggy Schreiber, Bruce Gardner, Gertrude Muenchen, Jerome Black.

Harris: Lloyd Humbert, William Shollito.

LAMAR ODD FELLOWS' BALL CLUB HAS NEW RULES

(From the Lamar Missouri Democrat)

The Carthage Odd Fellows are coming up tonight to play ball with the Lamar I. O. O. F.'s tonight.

One of the favorite evening sports in Lamar just now is indoor baseball. A feathered barb is thrown at a target approximately two feet square. On this large square are circles that indicate a strike, and other points of baseball. They choose up sides, and one man plays at a time, hurling the feather tipped barb at the target. The others, of course, sit or stand back and look on with critical appraising eyes.

Rev. Gilbert introduced this "parlor baseball" a year or two ago.

The Lamar Odd Fellows are having a mint of fun out of it. Recently their team went to Carthage and played the Odd Fellows there, the Carthagenians proving to be the better ball team.

But some of the Lamar Odd Fellows have been practicing up, and when the Cathage team comes this evening they want as much support along the side lines as possible.

Retrenchment May Be Advisable in Fees for Collection of Delinquent County Taxes.

*Robert S. Cain, County Treasurer-Elect, has dis-*appointed some of the politicians by announcing he will appoint John Brown, Jr., of Emsworth, as delinquent tax collector. The job is one of the most lucrative public offices—too lucrative, many students of civics assert. Now that retrenchment is the order of the day it may be advisable to let the county receive a bigger share of the delinquent taxes by reducing the collector's fee, or by placing him on a salary.

In the bequests received by many Pittsburgh charitable and welfare institutions in the final distribution of the late H. C. Frick's estate we have a concrete illustration of the fact that the accumulation of vast fortunes often results in public benefit. The Frick gifts could not have come to some of these institutions at a more opportune time.

Another illustration of the benefits that the public sometimes receives from the commercial interests may be found in the plans of the oil men to establish a memorial park at the site of the Drake well near Titusville, Pa., the first commercial producer in the United States. The American Petroleum Institute reports that the area is to be beautifully landscaped and a museum erected.

It is gratifying that Judge Sara M. Soffel has found that circumstances justify after all the return of Mrs. Louise Williams O'Leary's three-year-old son to the mother. The baby had been given to the Juvenile Court's home-finding department. It must be recognized that, monstrous though it seems, there are mothers not fit to be entrusted with children. The people whose sympathetic interest was aroused by the O'Leary baby's case will be glad to learn it does not fall in that category.

More bomb explosions are reported. A house in Dravosburg has been demolished and one in Sewickley partially wrecked. The constant occurrence of these crimes must be attributed to the failure of the police and county detectives to arrest the perpetrators. The situation steadily becomes more serious. It might be worth while for the civic associations to employ private detectives to investigate the bombings.

*The constitutionality of the Talbot bill, appropri-*ating $10,000,000 from the State's general fund for unemployment relief, is to be tested in the courts. The sooner the question is answered the better. In the meantime it is to be hoped Gov. Pinchot will accede to the request of local legislators and civic leaders that he call a conference to see what else can be done to relieve distress.

The resignation of President Ross Leffler and four other members of the State Game Commission who charge that Gov. Pinchot has violated his pledge to keep politics out of the Commission's affairs puts the Governor on the defensive. Politics is undoubtedly out of place in the work of game conservation. So long as they do their work properly it should make no difference what the Commissioners' political learnings are.

That was an impressive statement that William E. Best, of Dormont, president of the United States Building and Loan League, made at the Pitt Business Men's luncheon concerning the strength of the building and loan associations. The number of people in the Pittsburgh district who have come into possession of homes through these associations is legion.

An aviator who was forced to make a landing near Greensburg a few days ago says that he was blinded by the smoke from the coke ovens and lost his way. His mishap is regrettable, to be sure, but no regret can be felt over the fact that smoke was issuing from the coke ovens.

The airplane again proved itself an agent of mercy in the rapid trip that it enabled a Pittsburgh specialist to make to Steubenville, O., where he was called to remove a pin which had become lodged in the throat of a little girl. By flying the doctor found it possible to remove the pin before it had seriously injured the child. Aviation has saved many lives.

'otzman, weather forecaster, states that it o go back 50 years to find a parallel for the mildarly winter. Many of us would rather have it a little colder. Many would suffer if it were colder. One of the pleasant things about living in Western Pennsylvania is the fickleness of the weather. Its variety gives spice to life.

*The Public Service Commission finds that mali-*cious tampering, by a person or persons unknown, with the airbrake system was responsible for the Pennsylvania Railroad freight wreck near Gallitzin on December 9, which resulted in the death of one man and injuries to three others. This case, so exceptional in its nature, emphasizes that wrecks are now of rare occurrence.

New Year's next. You will get an advance taste of the celebration in a gay night club scene reproduced in full color in the Gravure Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph to be issued tomorrow. It is a reproduction of a painting by Jose Mompou which was shown in the Spanish department of the Thirtieth International Exhibition of paintings at Carnegie Institute.

The Gravure Section tomorrow will also present another page of photographs of interesting babies. The "Remember?" department will be noteworthy for some old time pictures of Boies Penrose and E. V. Babcock. A striking picture of the flood of 1907 swirling around the Smithfield Street Bridge is another interesting feature.

Everyone will find something of absorbing interest in the American Weekly Magazine section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. The story of a race of supermen who are believed to have lived 20,000 years ago is continued, and there are articles about hoboes, trained pigeons, the explosion on [illegible] Richman's yacht and other matters. In all of them you will find curious facts that you will be glad to know.

The Leaning Tower

Europe's modern Leaning Tower
Topples dangerously westward,
Threatening to fall upon us,

Will American taxpayers

Or are they content to stagger

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—I'm back on the old plantation after a dash in the subway during the rush hour. A friend, driving me downtown, wanted to wait. "Never mind," I waved airily, "I'll take the subway." Taking the subway is a good trick if you do it. That and a one and a half on the slack wire.

I slipped a nickle in the turnstile at Brooklyn Bridge and joined homegoing villagers. Wandering down the platform to peek at myself in the penny machines, I heard an express roaring in, made for it and half New York's working classes made for me.

As quick as that I was in the dead center of a milling pack. "Keep the orchestra playing. I'll be all right." Houdini once told me one needs have no fear in crowds if one would relax. So I let myself go limp. You'd have to look twice to know I didn't have the withers.

Relaxing may be arty in refined circles, but among the Grand Central set it is practically no good. I wouldn't trade the pair of hand-tooled leather garters Jay Price sent from China for six subway relaxes—with a celluloid mandolin pick to boot.

In the blur it struck me that only people making headway were those fighting their way tauntly. So I began to stiffen and nobody can be a bigger stiff. Closing my eyes and lowering my head I plunged. Looking up I had made a yard—Oh, well an inch anyway.

* * *

In the meantime, the express left and those remaining began adjusting hats, coats, neckties—and, Law me and oh, Gee, brassiers for all I know—to await the next. They zoom in every three minutes. While everybody was off guard I decided to squirm forward. Some day I'd love to show lantern slides of my squirming.

Not enjoying a halitosis test with the gentleman face to face with me I tried to advance in wriggles. Like these—s s s s. And was doing perfectly finely when an annoyed fellow in front sneered: "What's the idea, Buddy—ants?" The glance I gave that chickabiddy!

* * *

Another train shot in. Before I could clutch my hat I was sailing through sliding doors—the arm that reached for my hat still stuck up like a flag pole. Breathing down the collar of a neighbor, I inquired: "Do you mind if I pull my arm down?"

Without looking from his tabloid he said: "I wouldn't mind if you helped yourself to a saucer of rat poison." And spring just around the corner.

* * *

Luckily he hopped off at the next station. I was thinking up a beaut reply. Two more stations and I'd had it. But another jam swept through the doors flinging me down the car with the up in the air arm still up and numb. It knocked against one of those porcelain loops, quaintly called straps, and I clutched, and clutched. What's this—a clutch orgy? In dizzying around curves, I was continually thrown against one of those Peter Arno "I'm all ears!" ladies.

* * *

Near Grand Central she snapped: "Stop kneeing me!" I replied: "Who? Me?" She said evenly: "You heard me!" That sort! And did I keep my mouth shut. And there we were bowling along—me and my set of loose knees and the arm still up. As Dorothy Parker would say: "The Loose Kneed Boys in Around the Horn. The Loose Kneed Boys in the Subway." But at my age, what I've been through and my life practically over, I should be worrying about jelly knees.

In the confusion, I discovered I'd passed my station and with customary symptoms—quick gulp, wild look around and wilder dash. To board a subway train, just stand and be patient. You'll be pushed on. But getting off is 'sumpin? At 72d street I almost made the exit but the doors closed. "See here," I gibbered to the guard, clapping my hands sharply. "Let me off. I'm a reporter and if you don't I'll write up your company." He jeered: "Yeah? You and Brisbane," and went on guarding.

I raised such a hullabaloo at the next station someone gave me a swift shove and off I went in quick skips and a Billy Watson slide. It was 116th street but I should care. It's life. I've wanted to look around Columbia anyway. And play leap frog about the campus with Prof. Butler.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Well, we've had Christmas.

We've sung carols and lighted Christmas trees and distributed charity and said the usual beautiful things about peace-on-earth-good-will-to-men.

So that's that. Now let's get down and face facts.

Let's face those facts which will determine our course, and our country's course for the next 12 months. Let's stop hanging wreaths on ourselves and cut out the beaming ballyhoo and have the courage and honesty to ask the one, fundamental, shameful question which yesterday makes imperative to ask—

IS THIS A CHRISTIAN NATION?

AFTER MORE THAN 150 YEARS OF PROGRESS AND PROSPERITY AND PRODIGIOUS LABOR, ARE WE A CHRISTIAN NATION?

We have celebrated the supreme Christian holiday—

We have gone through a number of admirable Christian gestures—

And we are chuck full of brotherly love and turkey hash—

But the fact remains—WE ARE NOT A CHRISTIAN NATION.

No nation where thousands of men and women and children are hungry and homeless and hopeless on Christmas Day is a Christian nation.

Even though we feed and warm them all for a day, that will not make us a Christian nation.

Even though we build churches and establish elaborate hospitals and social service centers, that will not make us a Christian nation.

AS LONG AS WE PERMIT CONDITIONS WHICH PRODUCE HUNGER AND IGNORANCE, VICE AND FILTH, POVERTY AND UNEMPLOYMENT, DESPAIR AND DISEASE, WE ARE NOT A CHRISTIAN NATION.

As long as we permit dark alleys—

And slums—

And sweat shops—

And blind pigs—

And factories and fields run by child labor—

And brutalizing penitentiaries and reform schools—

As long as we permit an industrial system which gives rich men and smart men too much chance, and poor men and stupid men not enough chance—

As long as we break people's pride by forcing them to take charity instead of jobs—

As long as some are well born and some are ill born—

As long as some are born privileged and some born handicapped—

As long as there is one child in America who has not an equal chance with all other children at health and happiness—

THIS IS NOT A CHRISTIAN NATION . . . AND WE'D BETTER STOP KIDDING OURSELVES THAT WE ARE.

Yesterday we remembered a gentle Christ, born in a manger.

Today we would do well to remember an indignant Christ who befriended the outcast and the needy . . . who rebuked the hypocrites and Pharisees . . . who lashed the money changers from the temple . . . who cried, with His dying breath—

"FATHER, FORGIVE THEM—THEY KNOW NOT WHAT THEY DO!"

Yesterday we kept holiday for a Poor Man, for a Man who gave His life for other poor men. And while we feasted, outside in the street, shuffling along in the rain and the wind and the mud, seven million desperate men filed by!

Suppose Christ had been in that pitiful mob?

HOW DO YOU KNOW HE WASN'T?

Father, forgive us!

Forgive us for our selfishness, our stupidity, our muddling and drifting that have brought America to such a Christmas as that!

Father, forgive us—we knew not what we did!

BUT WE CAN LEARN!

Cupid Tales a Holiday

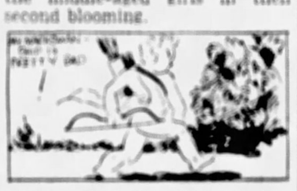
Nowadays, when Cupid wants to wound a man's heart, he aims at his head—or his pocketbook.

* * *

The Bow-Boy is looking for a soft target, when he should be taking some new lessons in marksmanship.

* * *

His arrows are flying wild—and most of them seem to be hitting the wrong people. The middle-aged men who should be impregnable, but seem to be much more impressionable and soft-headed than the young Lotharios. And the middle-aged girls in their second blooming.



Every time Eros lifts his bow and aims at a sweet young debutante, her grandmother gets in the way. And every time he aims at a gay young bachelor, his dad holds out his wallet and deflects the arrow.

* * *

Dear old girls, who ought to be petting their arteries or sitting by the fire knitting doll-caps for the children, are out getting platinumed and "face-lifted" and learning the new dance steps.

* * *

And nice old boys, who should be warding off rheumatism, counting their calories and learning how to whittle and play checkers, are plastering the remaining strands of hair across their foreheads and flashing wicked smiles with all their bridgework, at the flappers.

* * *

Cupid keeps all his arrows for the peppermint-lozenge age. He probably figures that he'd have to use a machine-gun to put the younger generation on the spot—sentimentally speaking.

Grandmother no longer reads the household hints and cuts out the recipes for current buns and blackberry mush; she skips right over the newspaper, until she finds an advertisement for something that will help her figure. The beauty column is her meat.

* * *

And Granddad barely skims the political news and sports sections, and hurries on to the ads for hair-restorers and reducing diets.

* * *

All of which is their own business and gives them a zest in life, which is better than sitting around grumbling and picking on the younger generation. If they will only watch their step, and remember that while a young heart and lovely arteries are all right after 40, they are no excuse for a weak mind and a giddy head.

* * *

When Cupid aims at your vanity, make sure that your heart is arrow-proof and your wallet is out of range!

Europe Rediscovers America

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Nothing could be more promising than the effect of one week of Congress in convincing Europe that there is an American sentiment, an American policy and an American governmental agency determined to stand for American interests first. Reading the comments of the European press, one's curiosity increases regarding the conversations between Mr. Hoover and MacDonald, Laval and Grandi; and the conversations of Mr. Stimson in Europe; and the secret conversation between Mr. Mellon with MacDonald and the head of the Bank of England.

Just what was said in these conversations by Mr. Hoover to persuade the Europeans that it would be possible to shift the burden of billions from the backs of other people who owe it to the backs of Americans who loaned it?

We are not among those who assume that America is absolutely independent of the outside world, that is the reason we opposed the Grundy tariff which has wrought the ruin of our foreign markets. But when we are confronted with the arrogant demand that the cost of the war shall be transferred to the shoulders of our people, the time has come to take a stand with and for America. There was not the most remote suggestion when the loans were made to Europe that they would not be paid; there was nothing said or thought about the payment being conditioned on reparations.

There is not one sane reason why the American people should be taxed through the years to come to pay the debts of other nations, some of which are far more prosperous than we are today.

* * *

'A Policy of Isolation'

We read in the London papers that a refusal to assume the debts of England and France and pay them out of the pockets of our people is "a policy of isolation"; if that is "isolation" we are for it.

We are told by the English press that England has abandoned hope that America will "help toward economic recovery," and the answer is that the economic recovery of America will not be served by saddling the debts of 14 nations on our backs.

We are told that the "Congressional outbursts" comes as an "ice blast" to Britain, and the "Congressional outburst" took the form of a specific declaration that the moratorium for a year does not mean that we are willing to hold the bag for the world.

What could have been said by Mr. Hoover, Mr. Stimson or Mr. Mellon in these secret conversations with MacDonald, Laval, Grandi and the head of the Bank of England to warm the English with the thought that we were willing to transfer the world's debts to our own people?

* * *

Democrats Fought The Grundy Act

Mr. Wickham Stead, the English journalist, is bitter, and mostly because the American Congress concerned itself with American interests on the debts. But he says one thing to which no sensible and satisfactory answer can be made by us:

"Neither he (Senator Reed) nor any other speaker in Congress seemed to appreciate the effect of the tariff raised last year to prohibitive heights, making it more difficult for foreign countries to remit payments to the United States."

It was a stupid proceeding to which we were forced under the lash of Mr. Hoover in the Senate; but when Mr. Stead says that no one in Congress appears to appreciate the fact he writes out of the superabundance of his ignorance. The Democrats of Congress fought the Grundy act upon the very ground Stead mentions.

Something must be done—it will be very difficult now that we have forced other nations to retaliation—about that tariff. But that is entirely different from unloading the debts of other nations on our backs.

Evidently Mr. Stead, who is shocked that Congress does not follow Mr. Hoover's leadership, is ignorant of the fact that he, more than any man in our public life, is responsible for the tariff which increases the difficulty of the debtor nations in meeting their obligations.

* * *

A Measure of Hoover's Leadership

One thing now is certain: Mr. Hoover's recommendation for a revival of the World War Debts Commission is rejected by the amendment in the House. The Senate will keep the amendment. Without that amendment even the one-year moratorium would have been rejected; and that because men like Mr. Stead were assuring the Europeans that the moratorium meant the transfer of the debts.

On that proposition Mr. Hoover could not carry his party with him; he seldom does. It is a measure of his leadership.

That incapacity to lead or determination to lead in the wrong direction is not least among the tragedies of the unprecedented American panic and distress.

* * *

A Remarkable Spectacle Of Unity

Meanwhile public business is being held back by the bickerings and Donnybrook fairs and Kilkenny cat fights of the Republicans in Congress. They cannot even elect a president pro tem in the Senate. That silly contest continues because the reactionaries are determined, through the re-election of Senator Moses, to force the progressives of the West to bare their backs to the brand of "Sons of wild jackasses." "The only party fit to govern" forsooth.

Last week the Republicans in the House staged a remarkable spectacle of unity in the mob scene about Mr. McFadden, with the none too edifying picture of Senator Reed emerging from a conference at the White House with the statement that the former chairman of the committee on banking would be refused the patronage to which he is entitled as the representative of the Republicans of his district. And on top of it all, a wet bloc of 60 Republican members has been announced to battle against Mr. Hoover's noble experiment.

* * *

The Delectable Mr. Lucas

This is the atmosphere in which Senator Fess starts out to "sell Mr. Hoover to the country," as though it were a bankrupt sale. And this perhaps the explanation of the rather contemptible action of Mr. Lucas of the Republican National Committee in attempting to place the responsibility for the books. "The Strange Career of Mr. Hoover Under Two Flags" and "The Mirrors of Washington" on the Democratic National Committee. Mr. Shouse's, prompt denunciation of this story as a lie out of the cloth was hardly necessary.

Every one knows that the "Mirrors of Washington" was written by Mr. Tucker, of the Scripps-Howard press, which supported Mr. Hoover in 1928. And "The Strange Career of Mr. Hoover Under Two Flags" has figured in the courts of New York City, with the names of all concerned, and with a Tammany judge granting a temporary injunction and expressing his disapproval of the attack upon a President of the United States. The recourse of the President is in the courts, where President Roosevelt went long ago.

But from Mr. Lucas! Mr. Lucas, who knows so much about the vicious and villainous falsehoods about Al Smith, sent out, and paid for, in 1928. Mr. Lucas, caught red-handed in the most disreputable undercover attack on Senator Norris in 1930. The delectable Mr. Lucas!

ISN'T IT SO?

To be a gentleman you have to be fair in your discussions.

There seems to be no slump, however, in the high hat production.

Most of us are eager to share our troubles. For that matter, no man can keep his happiness to himself either.

Other people's burdens may be a tax on us, but a man's good opinion of himself never gets too heavy for him to carry.

The average luxury is a necessity a man can't afford.

Love letters written during courting are likely to be read during court.

Lots of people who boast that they are in the swim have a hard time to keep their heads above water.

Some of the "tired business men" would be more rested if they were privileged to work harder.
